Molotov Challenges Mind Changing

RUSSIAN BLASTS BRITISH MOVE ON COMPROMISE

Little Nations Trying To Make Bidault Permanent Of Peace Conference

PARIS, Aug. 2—Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov challenged the right of other members to the big four today to change their minds on the rules of procedure submitted to the peace conference by the council of foreign ministers.

Molotov launched his attack in the midst of a fight by the small powers to make French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault the permanent chairman of the peace conference instead of rotating the chairmanship among the big four as the foreign ministers proposed.

He attacked a British reference which called the big four rules "suggestions."

The reference had been made by undersecretary of state for foreign affairs Hector McNeil.

McNeil offered a compromise under which Bidault would be named chairman and Chinese Foreign Minister Wang Shih-Chieh be named vice-chairman.

Molotov attacked McNeil for deserting the rules which the big four had submitted. He said he could not understand how Britain could vote for a rotating chairmanship in the council of foreign ministers and then propose to abandon that rule at the procedure commission.

The Soviet foreign minister appealed for unanimity on the chairmanship issue. France then expressed the view that it would be most regrettable if the decision on the chairmanship was reached by anything except an unanimous vote and urged the small nations to end their fight and accept the big four formula.

Herbert Evatt, Australian foreign minister and leader of the small nation bloc, charged that the big four had shown disrespect for the conference by limiting the chairmanship to themselves.

"When we come to the treaty with Japan," he said, "such procedure will be deeply resented."

The commission session finally adjourned without reaching a decision on the chairmanship.

Molotov's contention was directly opposed to that of Secretary of State James F. Byrnes who contends the conference can make its own rules and that he is not bound to support the big four rules.

The French strongly implied that Bidault did not desire to take the chairmanship unless the conference was united in his support.

An overnight search for a compromise formula was expected to ensue.

500 Leads For Probes Are Studied

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2—The Mead committee today tackled one of its toughest jobs—selecting from 500 leads the war profits investigations it will make next.

The senators met in closed session to set up priorities for the inquiries.

Sen. Homer Ferguson, R., Mich., a committee member, told reporters:

"The committee, if it wanted to, could start 500 new investigations tomorrow."

Up for committee discussion today were arguments over:

1. New steps in its inquiry into the Army's use of defective 4.2-inch mortar shells which exploded prematurely in combat, killing and maiming American soldiers. Stark new eyewitness accounts of such incidents by former GI's were disclosed late yesterday.

2. When to undertake a spot check of possible war profiteering in the aviation, automotive, aluminum and shipbuilding industries. Plans for this are under way to learn whether renegotiation of war contracts and high wartime taxes actually "took the profits out of war" as congress had intended.

3. Whether to assign a top priority to the case of Theodore Wyman, much-investigated former district engineer at Hawaii at the time of Pearl Harbor. The joint

PORTERS QUIT HOME POSITIONS

New Superintendent, Matron Sought For Pickaway Children's Home

Carl Porter and his wife, Emily Fay Porter, submitted their resignations as superintendent and matron, respectively, of the Pickaway County Children's Home, at a meeting of the Board of Trustees of that institution Thursday afternoon. The resignations were accepted.

Probate Judge Sterling M. Lamb, a board member, announced Friday that a new superintendent will be sought immediately and that the board will consider the applications of all persons eligible for the post. The persons selected for the superintendency, it was explained, will name the matron.

Porter, who was appointed superintendent of the Children's Home in October, 1943, said he and Mrs. Porter will relinquish their duties as soon as a successor takes over. No reason was given for the resignations, and Porter said they did not care to announce their plans for the future.

Anyone desiring to apply for the position as superintendent may get in touch with Judge Lamb. The post is under civil service.

YOUNG NEGRO IDENTIFIED AS ATTACK KILLER

MINEOLA, N. Y., Aug. 2—A 23-year old North Carolina Negro was identified today by Marjory Jeanne Logan, 25, a former WAC, as the man who criminally attacked and wounded her after he had shot and killed her mother in their luxurious suburban home here July 24.

The suspect, identified as Ward Beecher Caraway, 23, has been working as a butler and chauffeur at a nearby home. He was arrested last night at Southold, police disclosed and taken to Nassau hospital where Miss Logan is recovering from bullet wounds.

The young woman made the positive identification immediately.

SOVIETS CHARGE GERMAN PLANTS ARE STRIPPED

Russians Claim Equipment For Reparations Removed From U. S. Zone

MOSCOW, Aug. 2—The Tass agency charged in a Berlin dispatch today that industrial plants in the American and British zones of Germany earmarked for reparations have been stripped, looted or sold to German firms.

(Today is the first anniversary of the Potsdam declaration, in which Britain and the United States pledged to deliver to Russia a percentage of the removable industrial equipment in their zones.)

"As a result, there is no industrial equipment, or only incomplete units of no value, at the present time in many plants listed for reparations," Tass said.

The agency listed several plants in the American zone from which it said equipment had been removed, although they were listed for reparations payments.

"In the first place this applies to plants of the aircraft industry, namely 10 aircraft plant branches of the Messerschmitt firm in the American zone from which all equipment has entirely disappeared," Tass said.

"American authorities at Landsberg refused permission to inspect the Dornier aircraft plant, also on the reparations list, declaring there was no equipment whatsoever in this plant."

(Several weeks ago the United States announced that shipments of industrial reparations material from the American zone to Russia had been halted. The Potsdam agreement gave Russia 10 per cent of removable industrial equipment in the western zones, plus 15 per cent for which she was to pay in goods.

The Tass dispatch added:

"About 300 units of incomplete old equipment of the Flensberg aircraft plant are listed for reparations, while there is complete equipment of good quality in plant's stores which hasn't been handed over for reparations and which is being sold to German firms.

"There also is no equipment at the present time in the Keller and Manz plant at Anspach. About 30 automatic lathes have been shipped from this plant to the stores of—Brewery."

Tass said similar facts had been noted in the British zone.

BRITISH-STYLED TEL AVIV ROUNDUP

TWO OF THE 20,000 fully-armed British soldiers engaged in a mass manhunt for members of Zionist terrorist gangs in Tel Aviv, Palestine, stand guard over a barbed wire enclosure in which, to date, 133 men and boys and 10 girls and women are being detained for questioning. The intensive search came as an aftermath of the King David hotel bombing in which 100 persons were killed. This is a radiophoto. (International Soundphoto)

Bombs Explode, Unrest Spreads In Holy Land

JERUSALEM, Aug. 2 — Two bombs exploded today outside Tel Aviv, where the British were winding up an intense search for extremists, and a military cordon was thrown around the Rehavia Jewish quarter of Jerusalem.

All of Palestine seethed with unrest. Sporadic outcroppings of violence were matched by the tightening of British counter-measures.

A fleet of small craft were reported cruising somewhere off Palestine with some 10,000 refugees who cannot legally enter this country. Rumors circulated that an attempt might be made to liberate hundreds of illegal immigrants detained at Haifa.

Without explanation the British army suddenly revoked an earlier order lifting the rigid curfew on Tel Aviv, which had been scheduled for this afternoon. The revocation said the ending of the curfew would not be announced until half an hour before the four-day search of the city was over.

Many more suspected extremists were arrested in Tel Aviv. At least some of them were on police lists of wanted persons. One had a price on his hand. Another was identified as one of the kidnapers of five British officers last month.

The cordoning off of the Jewish quarter of Palestine evidently was aimed at facilitating a search to that in Tel Aviv. The sequestered area included the headquarters of the Jewish agency, seized more than a month ago at the outset of a British campaign against terror-

SOLONS EXPECT TO QUIT TODAY

Social Security Compromise Improves Chances For Final Adjournment

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 — A compromise on social security legislation today improved the chances of congressional adjournment by nightfall.

Administration leaders conceded that their plans to send congress on its longest vacation in eight years still could encounter stumbling blocks.

But they were optimistic that congress in a few hours would complete action on the last three major items. They were:

1. A $2,795,000,000 appropriation bill including $2,479,000,000 for GI terminal leave pay and $26,000,000 for OPA.

2. The hotly contested social security measure freezing the payroll tax at one per cent on both employer and employees for 1947 and giving some additional federal benefits for dependent children, and the aged and crippled needy.

3. A resolution by which the United States would accept compulsory jurisdiction of the new world court on all matters affecting treaties and international law.

The court resolution was a late and tentative starter on the administration's "must" program. It was brought up in the closing hours by Sen. Wayne L. Morse, R., Ore., but gained momentum under arguments that to reject it now would embarass American emissaries at the current Paris peace conference.

Both the senate and house had yet to act on the appropriation bill and the social security measure.

The social security bill had been the chief stumbling block until conferees agreed last night on differences between the two houses.

KEENAN OUSTER FROM JAP TRIAL IS REQUESTED

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 2—Some members of the prosecution staff have asked Gen. Douglas MacArthur to remove Joseph B. Keenan as chief war crimes trial prosecutor, and NBC radio correspondent said today.

George Thomas Folster, quoting "highly reliable sources," said that these persons, who had been "dissatisfied" with Keenan, were "surprised" when he returned to Tokyo after a recent trip to the United States.

"However, Gen. MacArthur felt, according to these same sources, that it was not within his jurisdiction to alter the appointment made by another department back in Washington," Folster said.

ATOM ISOTOPES TO AID FIGHT AGAINST ILLS

Radioactive Particles To Be Used In Battle On Cancer And Other Disease

OAK RIDGE, Tenn., Aug. 2—America's war-born atom bomb project made its first peacetime contribution to mankind today.

The army delivered to civilian laboratories the initial consignment of radioactiviey isotopes for use in combating cancer and other disease.

The isotopes—common elements which take on radioactive properties under bombardment in atomic ovens — will enable scientists to trace with unprecedented accuracy the life processes of both animals and plants.

Officers of the Manhattan atom bomb project said the hospitals and laboratories which received the initial shipment would use the material in seeking the causes not only of cancer but of diabetes, lukemia, anemia, tooth decay and other human diseases.

First recipient of the radioactive materials was the Barnard Free Skin & Cancer hospital of St. Louis.

The University of California, University of Minnesota, Vanderbilt University, and the Universities of Pennsylvania and Chicago were among other institutions receiving isotopes from the first consignment.

The initial peacetime products of the atomic bomb project were pea-sized units of carbon 14. After the bombardment in atomic ovens, the carbon becomes radioactive, sending out 37,000,000 beta particles (rays) per second for as long as 10,000 years, the Army said.

Scientists combine the isotopes into compounds that are fed into the human body or into a plant. Then, with the aid of a Geiger counter—which registers waves emitted by the radioactive particles—the scientists can trace the progress of these materials through the life processes.

When something goes wrong with the bodily processes, the trouble may be traced with these isotopes.

BRITISH LIKE ATOMIC PLANS

Noel Baker Says American And Russian Proposals Should Be Integrated

LONDON, Aug. 2—Minister of State Philip J. Noel Baker told the house of commons today that Britain approved both the Russian and American plans for control of atomic energy and believes the two plans should be integrated.

Noel Baker said that the American plan which would place under international ownership and control all raw material which could be used for atomic energy was "of tremendous scope and importance."

"It is a tremendous proposal," he said. "It is revolutionary. There has been nothing like it in international affairs before and let us not by the slightest inflection of our voices detract from the importance of the decisions which the United States government came to when they put this plan forward."

He said that the Soviet plan proposing that the manufacture and use of atomic energy for warlike purposes should be outlawed "does not conflict with the American plan."

"They must be integrated," he said.

Noel Baker spoke briefly in de-

EX-GIs TAKE OVER ATHENS, TENNESSEE FOLLOWING RIOTS

More Than Score Wounded During Gory Fight Over Primary Election; State Militia Ordered Out To Restore Order

By LARRY DALE
United Press Staff Correspondent

ATHENS, Tenn., Aug. 2— A gory six-hour election battle ended today in victory for 1,000 former G. I.'s and their followers when they forced the surrender of 75 special deputies who had barricaded themselves in the city jail through a wild night of gunfire.

More than a score of men had been wounded, some critically, as the shooting died down and a regiment of state militia, equipped with machine guns, marched on the city to restore complete order. Reports that two deputies had been slain and their bodies might be lying still in the scarred, smoking jail building had not been verified.

The deputies marched from their blood-spattered stronghold with their hands up to end the shooting that erupted late yesterday when the G. I.-Non-Partisan league challenged the McMinn county machine with both ballots and bullets during the primary election.

Crude dynamite bombs turned the trick after volley after volley from rifles, shotguns and other arms had failed to dislodge the deputies from the jail where they held three G. I.'s hostage and had cornered most of the ballot boxes.

Mid-town Athens, where fires from burning automobiles cast a lurid light over the night fighting, resembled a miniature battleground. Chunks were torn from the two-story brick jail house by the gunfire blasts and a dynamite bomb had blasted down the porch. Wreckage of seven automobiles littered the streets. Many buildings bore scars from the prolonged shooting.

The violence was not ended immediately with the surrender of the deputies, part of a force of 300 mostly "imported" men who had been hired by Sheriff Pat Mansfield of the machine to guard the polls. As the bloody, bedraggled men streamed from the jail they were set upon by a swelling crowd and many of them beaten, kicked and spat upon before wiser heads took charge.

League Claims Election

Most of the deputies, except those seriously wounded, were returned to the jail as prisoners of the G. I.-Non Partisan league. The league proclaimed itself victor in the election.

A repetition of the Athens battle was threatened at Etowah, eight miles to the east, when a G. I. shock force made ready to move on that town and seize the ballot boxes. But on receiving an ultimatum from the veterans, the machine officials in Etowah hastily conceded the election and the expedition was called off.

The G. I.'s candidate for sheriff, overseas veteran Knox Henry, apparently won that coveted post over Paul Cantrell, head of the

M'KELLAR WINS IN SENATE RACE

Violence Takes Headlines From Bitter Fight Against CIO

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 2—Veteran Sen. K. D. McKellar was renominated for a sixth term today, but vote violence that marked the Tennessee primary shaded the bitter E. H. Crump vs. CIO angle of the election.

McKellar, senate seat-holder for 30 years, had 152,107 votes to 89,346 for 46-year-old Edward W. (Ned) Carmack, former Murfreesboro newspaper publisher, favored by the CIO.

Unofficial reports had been tabulated from 85 of Tennessee's 95 counties.

Three other candidates picked up a few scattered thousand votes.

Gov. Jim McCord, also with Crump's blessing, was returned to office over Lt. Col. Gordon Browning, a former Tennessee governor, still on military duty in Germany.

Unofficial returns early today gave McCord 148,000 votes, Browning 106,256.

In Athens, Tenn., McMinn county, election night disorders that resulted in a wholesale battle between supporters of a GI ticket and backers of the machine party in power, climaxed with the calling out of the state guard.

A close contest was staged in the Republican-heavy first district where Dayton Phillips, John Kilgo, and Joe Wolfenbarger were trying for the representative's post left open when B. Carroll Reese resigned to accept the GOP national committee chairmanship.

SHIPS DRIVEN BY ATOM POWER DUE IN 1950'S

OFF BIKINI ATOLL, Aug. 2—Ships will be driven by atomic power plants in the 1950's and airplanes "much later," Vice Adm. W. H. P. Blandy, commander of joint task force one, predicted today.

He promised in a prepared statement that the Navy "intends to press development of these plants with all possible vigor."

Blandy said it was too early to draw "final conclusions" from the two tests conducted during operations crossroads. But he left no doubt that the atomic bomb had proved a fearful weapon against naval formations.

"We know now, for instance," he said, "that with ships closely grouped, one atomic bomb exploded either from the air or at comparatively shallow depth underwater, can sink several ships.

"It can damage more or less severely a very considerable additional number, and cause many casualties among their crews."

Blandy said the Bikini tests would enable the Navy to eliminate ship design weaknesses in the atomic future, take steps to protect crews, and open the way for necessary changes in maneuvers and naval strategy.

NEW EAST-WEST SPEED RECORD IS SET BY B-29

BURBANK, Calif., Aug. 2—An Army B-29 Superfortress which flew an average 300 miles an hour against prevailing headwinds today had set a new transcontinental east-west speed record of seven hours, 28 minutes.

The plane, piloted by Capt. Boyd L. (Danny) Grubaugh, Van Wert, O., left La Guardia field, New York, at 9:54 a. m. (EST) yesterday and landed at Lockheed air terminal here at 2:22.34 p. m. (PST)

The flight, which cut nearly two hours from the record set last May 28 by a Navy Lockheed PV-2, was termed "uneventful" by members of the seven-man crew.

The east-west run was three hours lower than the west-east mark of 4 hours 15 minutes set by a Lockheed jet-propelled P-80 Shooting Star.

JERUSALEM, Aug. 2 — Two bombs exploded today outside Tel Aviv, where the British were winding up an intense search for extremists, and a military cordon was thrown around the Rehavia Jewish quarter of Jerusalem.

All of Palestine seethed with unrest. Sporadic outcroppings of violence were matched by the tightening of British counter-measures.

A fleet of small craft were reported cruising somewhere off Palestine with some 10,000 refugees who cannot legally enter this country. Rumors circulated that an attempt might be made to liberate hundreds of illegal immigrants detained at Haifa.

Without explanation the British army suddenly revoked an earlier order lifting the rigid curfew on Tel Aviv, which had been scheduled for this afternoon. The revocation said the ending of the curfew would not be announced until half an hour before the four-day search of the city was over.

Many more suspected extremists were arrested in Tel Aviv. At least some of them were on police lists of wanted persons. One had a price on his hand. Another was identified as one of the kidnapers of five British officers last month.

The cordoning off of the Jewish quarter of Palestine evidently was aimed at facilitating a search to that in Tel Aviv. The sequestered area included the headquarters of the Jewish agency, seized more than a month ago at the outset of a British campaign against terror-

SOLONS EXPECT TO QUIT TODAY

Social Security Compromise Improves Chances For Final Adjournment

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 — A compromise on social security legislation today improved the chances of congressional adjournment by nightfall.

Administration leaders conceded that their plans to send congress on its longest vacation in eight years still could encounter stumbling blocks.

But they were optimistic that congress in a few hours would complete action on the last three major items. They were:

1. A $2,795,000,000 appropriation bill including $2,479,000,000 for GI terminal leave pay and $26,000,000 for OPA.

2. The hotly contested social security measure freezing the payroll tax at one per cent on both employer and employees for 1947 and giving some additional federal benefits for dependent children, and the aged and crippled needy.

3. A resolution by which the United States would accept compulsory jurisdiction of the new world court on all matters affecting treaties and international law.

The court resolution was a late and tentative starter on the administration's "must" program. It was brought up in the closing hours by Sen. Wayne L. Morse, R., Ore., but gained momentum under arguments that to reject it now would embarass American emissaries at the current Paris peace conference.

Both the senate and house had yet to act on the appropriation bill and the social security measure.

The social security bill had been the chief stumbling block until conferees agreed last night on differences between the two houses.

KEENAN OUSTER FROM JAP TRIAL IS REQUESTED

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 2—Some members of the prosecution staff have asked Gen. Douglas MacArthur to remove Joseph B. Keenan as chief war crimes trial prosecutor, and NBC radio correspondent said today.

George Thomas Folster, quoting "highly reliable sources," said that these persons, who had been "dissatisfied" with Keenan, were "surprised" when he returned to Tokyo after a recent trip to the United States.

"However, Gen. MacArthur felt, according to these same sources, that it was not within his jurisdiction to alter the appointment made by another department back in Washington," Folster said.

ATOM ISOTOPES TO AID FIGHT AGAINST ILLS

Radioactive Particles To Be Used In Battle On Cancer And Other Disease

OAK RIDGE, Tenn., Aug. 2—America's war-born atom bomb project made its first peacetime contribution to mankind today.

The army delivered to civilian laboratories the initial consignment of radioactiviey isotopes for use in combating cancer and other disease.

The isotopes—common elements which take on radioactive properties under bombardment in atomic ovens — will enable scientists to trace with unprecedented accuracy the life processes of both animals and plants.

Officers of the Manhattan atom bomb project said the hospitals and laboratories which received the initial shipment would use the material in seeking the causes not only of cancer but of diabetes, lukemia, anemia, tooth decay and other human diseases.

First recipient of the radioactive materials was the Barnard Free Skin & Cancer hospital of St. Louis.

The University of California, University of Minnesota, Vanderbilt University, and the Universities of Pennsylvania and Chicago were among other institutions receiving isotopes from the first consignment.

The initial peacetime products of the atomic bomb project were pea-sized units of carbon 14. After the bombardment in atomic ovens, the carbon becomes radioactive, sending out 37,000,000 beta particles (rays) per second for as long as 10,000 years, the Army said.

Scientists combine the isotopes into compounds that are fed into the human body or into a plant. Then, with the aid of a Geiger counter—which registers waves emitted by the radioactive particles—the scientists can trace the progress of these materials through the life processes.

When something goes wrong with the bodily processes, the trouble may be traced with these isotopes.

Noel Baker Says American And Russian Proposals Should Be Integrated

LONDON, Aug. 2—Minister of State Philip J. Noel Baker told the house of commons today that Britain approved both the Russian and American plans for control of atomic energy and believes the two plans should be integrated.

Noel Baker said that the American plan which would place under international ownership and control all raw material which could be used for atomic energy was "of tremendous scope and importance."

"It is a tremendous proposal," he said. "It is revolutionary. There has been nothing like it in international affairs before and let us not by the slightest inflection of our voices detract from the importance of the decisions which the United States government came to when they put this plan forward."

He said that the Soviet plan proposing that the manufacture and use of atomic energy for war-like purposes should be outlawed "does not conflict with the American plan."

"They must be integrated," he said.

Noel Baker spoke briefly in de-

More Than Score Wounded During Gory Fight Over Primary Election; State Militia Ordered Out To Restore Order

By LARRY DALE
United Press Staff Correspondent

ATHENS, Tenn., Aug. 2— A gory six-hour election battle ended today in victory for 1,000 former G. I.'s and their followers when they forced the surrender of 75 special deputies who had barricaded themselves in the city jail through a wild night of gunfire.

More than a score of men had been wounded, some critically, as the shooting died down and a regiment of state militia, equipped with machine guns, marched on the city to restore complete order. Reports that two deputies had been slain and their bodies might be lying still in the scarred, smoking jail building had not been verified.

The deputies marched from their blood-spattered stronghold with their hands up to end the shooting that erupted late yesterday when the G. I.-Non-Partisan league challenged the McMinn county machine with both ballots and bullets during the primary election.

Crude dynamite bombs turned the trick after volley after volley from rifles, shotguns and other arms had failed to dislodge the deputies from the jail where they held three G. I.'s hostage and had cornered most of the ballot boxes.

Mid-town Athens, where fires from burning automobiles cast a lurid light over the night fighting, resembled a miniature battleground. Chunks were torn from the two-story brick jail house by the gunfire blasts and a dynamite bomb had blasted down the porch. Wreckage of seven automobiles littered the streets. Many buildings bore scars from the prolonged shooting.

The violence was not ended immediately with the surrender of the deputies, part of a force of 300 mostly "imported" men who had been hired by Sheriff Pat Mansfield of the machine to guard the polls. As the bloody, bedraggled men streamed from the jail they were set upon by a swelling crowd and many of them beaten, kicked and spat upon before wiser heads took charge.

MILITIA RECALLED

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 2—Gov. Jim McCord and Adjutant Gen. Hilton Butler announced today that orders for state guard troops to go into Athens have been rescinded and that the troops have returned to their homes.

League Claims Election

Most of the deputies, except those seriously wounded, were returned to the jail as prisoners of the G. I.-Non Partisan league. The league proclaimed itself victor in the election.

A repetition of the Athens battle was threatened at Etowah, eight miles to the east, when a G. I. shock force made ready to move on that town and seize the ballot boxes. But on receiving an ultimatum from the veterans, the machine officials in Etowah hastily conceded the election and the expedition was called off.

The G. I.'s candidate for sheriff, overseas veteran Knox Henry, apparently won that coveted post over Paul Cantrell, head of the

M'KELLAR WINS IN SENATE RACE

Violence Takes Headlines From Bitter Fight Against CIO

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 2—Veteran Sen. K. D. McKellar was renominated for a sixth term today, but vote violence that marked the Tennessee primary shaded the bitter E. H. Crump vs. CIO angle of the election.

McKellar, senate seat-holder for 30 years, had 152,107 votes to 89,346 for 46-year-old Edward W. (Ned) Carmack, former Murfreesboro newspaper publisher, favored by the CIO.

Unofficial reports had been tabulated from 85 of Tennessee's 95 counties.

Three other candidates picked up a few scattered thousand votes.

Gov. Jim McCord, also with Crump's blessing, was returned to office over Lt. Col. Gordon Browning, a former Tennessee governor, still on military duty in Germany.

Unofficial returns early today gave McCord 148,000 votes, Browning 106,256.

In Athens, Tenn., McMinn county, election night disorders that resulted in a wholesale battle between supporters of a GI ticket and backers of the machine party in power, climaxed with the calling out of the state guard.

A close contest was staged in the Republican-heavy first district where Dayton Phillips, John Kilgo, and Joe Wolfenbarger were trying for the representative's post left open when B. Carroll Reese resigned to accept the GOP national committee chairmanship.

SHIPS DRIVEN BY ATOM POWER DUE IN 1950'S

OFF BIKINI ATOLL, Aug. 2—Ships will be driven by atomic power plants in the 1950's and airplanes "much later," Vice Adm. W. H. P. Blandy, commander of joint task force one, predicted today.

He promised in a prepared statement that the Navy "intends to press development of these plants with all possible vigor."

Blandy said it was too early to draw "final conclusions" from the two tests conducted during operations crossroads. But he left no doubt that the atomic bomb had proved a fearful weapon against naval formations.

"We know now, for instance," he said, "that with ships closely grouped, one atomic bomb exploded either from the air or at comparatively shallow depth underwater, can sink several ships.

"It can damage more or less severely a very considerable additional number, and cause many casualties among their crews."

Blandy said the Bikini tests would enable the Navy to eliminate ship design weaknesses in the atomic future, take steps to protect crews, and open the way for necessary changes in maneuvers and naval strategy.

NEW EAST-WEST SPEED RECORD IS SET BY B-29

BURBANK, Calif., Aug. 2—An Army B-29 Superfortress which flew an average 300 miles an hour against prevailing headwinds today had set a new transcontinental east-west speed record of seven hours, 28 minutes.

The plane, piloted by Capt. Boyd L. (Danny) Grubaugh, Van Wert, O., left La Guardia field, New York, at 9:54 a. m. (EST) yesterday and landed at Lockheed air terminal here at 2:22.34 p. m. (PST)

The flight, which cut nearly two hours from the record set last May 28 by a Navy Lockheed PV-2, was termed "uneventful" by members of the seven-man crew.

The east-west run was three hours lower than the west-east mark of 4 hours 15 minutes set by a Lockheed jet-propelled P-80 Shooting Star.

county Democratic machine who had held the job three terms previously.

The deputies sent word out of the jail to cease fire so they could surrender after one of half a dozen makeshift dynamite bombs had knocked off the porch. They came out without their guns, saying they had run out of shells.

Woman In Siege

A woman, Mrs. Floyd John Buckman, had endured the siege. She and her husband were ordered out by the deputies just before they surrendered.

One jail defender was carried out so covered with blood it was impossible to tell if he were dead or alive. As he was placed in an ambulance, a woman in the crowd called out "doesn't he look sweet."

"And doesn't he look brave," yelled another.

By this time it seemed the whole town of 10,000 had swarmed to the jail area. The shooting had stopped entirely. Automobile spotlights played over the dejected deputies lined up before the building and horns blared.

A tremendous cheer went up as the ballot boxes were hauled from the jail and taken off by truck by members of the G. I. faction.

The yelling mob continued to make swipes at the deputies and one, C. M. Wise, who had only been sworn in yesterday, was knocked down repeatedly and dragged to his feet again. As each man struck him he yelled to the next in line "now you hit him."

Blood pouring from his eyes, ears, mouth and forehead, Wise finally was released as a businessman, Bill Cook, made himself heard above the crowd, shouting "men, let's not commit murder."

"No, not like they shot at our boys," a woman cried.

Pleads For Order

A veteran named Ralph Dugan then jumped out in front of the crowd and shouted "boys, you know I've been with you all day and it seems like I got a right to be heard from.

"We are going to put these men in jail and treat them a damn sight better than they would have treated us. You are fine young men, you have fought a good battle and you have won it.

"You are not going to do anything you'd regret now. We're going to keep the jail tonight. We want 150 to 200 armed men to be here. When the National Guard or whatever it is gets here we are going to have everything nice and orderly. We'll be in control and will dictate the terms."

As he finished to the accompaniment of wild cheers the G. I.'s dragged two more deputies from the jail.

In a special announcement, the "non-partisan" party to which the G. I.'s belonged along with dissident Democrats and Republicans asserted it had no choice in the riot except "to meet fire with fire."

'Met With Force'

"The G. I. election officials went to the polls unarmed to have a fair election as Pat Mansfield promised," the statement said. "They were met with blackjacks and pistols.

"Several G. I. officials were beaten and the ballot boxes were moved to the jail. The G. I. supporters went to the jail to get these ballot boxes and were met by gunfire."

"The G. I. candidates had promised that the votes would be counted as cast. They had no choice but to meet fire with fire. In the precincts where the G. I. candidates were allowed watchers they led by a 3 to 1 majority.

"The G. I.'s are elected and will serve as your county officials beginning Sept. 1, 1946."

The statement was signed by James Buttram, campaign manager whose towering figure had been the rallying point for the G. I.s throughout the battle of Athens.

A dozen fires had blazed in downtown Athens where members of the mob poured gasoline on automobiles belonging to the jail defenders, and turned them into torches which lit the terror swept streets.

At least one of the jail defenders had escaped through the mob. He was Bryan Sharpe who crawled out with part of one leg shot away, and made his way to Forie hospital for treatment.

"Thank God, I'm out of it," he said.

Women and children crouched in cellars at their homes or bolted their doors and hid under furniture as stray shots ricocheted through the streets of this sleepy mountain town.

The fight began when unarmed veterans who attempted to watch the balloting were roughed up by some of the 200 armed special deputy sheriffs, sworn in to "guard" the voting booths by Sheriff Mansfield, co-leader of the county Democratic machine.

The armed mob stormed the jail shortly after 10 o'clock last night and demanded the release of approximately 20 veterans who had been arrested during disturbances at the polls.

The barricaded deputies drove the mob back in an exchange of gun-fire, but the street-crowd then threw a seige ring around the jail and ignored repeated orders to disperse.

Gov. Jim McCord ordered a regiment of State Guard into Athens shortly after midnight. Another regiment was held in reserve.

The troops were ordered to put down the rioting as quickly as possible without further bloodshed.

Mob Heavily Armed

The mob was armed with submachine guns, rifles, pistols, shotguns, tear-gas, knives and clubs.

The day's entire voting was marked by clashes between the opposing factions. Fist fights were frequent.

By night fall, the office of the GI non-partisan committee, had become headquarters for angry veterans determined to protect the votes they had put in the ballot box.

Counting of ballots stopped when the gun fire broke out, but in the only returns reported the veteran-backed ticket was leading two to one.

The wounded were reported equally divided between the mob and the barricaded sheriff's forces.

Armed bands roved the streets. Neutral persons were unable to tell which side they represented. Sheriff Mansfield had brought in scores of outsiders, armed with squirrel rifles, shotguns and horse pistols in preparation for any trouble at the polls.

Hooligans tore down all telephone lines leading from the city.

Threatens Hostages

Shortly before midnight one of the special deputies stepped to a window of the jail and yelled that they would "shoot three of the veterans in here, unless you break it up."

The mob held its siege line. It was reported to be holding seven of the special deputies as hostages.

Col. Hilton Butler ordered the 6th regiment of the Tennessee state guard from Chattanooga to Athens when it was reported that several hundred veterans from other cities were rushing by automobile to bolster the local guard.

The veterans had sent observers to the polls when the old-line Democrats who control the party primary, in which nomination is tantamount to election, announced that the ballots would be counted only by machine Democrats.

The veterans had waged a strong pre-election campaign to oust the old-line regulars headed by State Sen. Paul Cantrell and Sheriff Mansfield. The two had decided to change jobs in this election, Cantrell running for sheriff and Mansfield for state senator.

The veterans did not put up a candidate to oppose Mansfield, but backed Knox Henry, a war veteran, for sheriff.

Mansfield swore in 300 special deputies, armed them, and sent them to the polls to stand guard.

The veterans sent unarmed watchers to each poll to report irregularities.

Clash At Polls

The first clash between the armed deputies and the veterans' observers occurred at the voting booth in the city light and water building. There seven special deputies allegedly threatened to kill the two ex-GI observers, Charles Scott, Jr., and Ed Vestal. The deputy sheriffs refused to let them leave the building.

When two newspapermen, Lowell F. Arterburn, publisher, and Neal Fosminger, reporter, of the Athens Post-Athenian, dropped in to ask how the election was going, Scott and Vestal plunged through a glass door and escaped.

"We decided that would be a good time to get out of there," Scott said.

The two went to a hospital and were treated for severe cuts. They then reported the incident to the Non-Partisan committee headquarters. A few minutes later the veterans appeared on the street with guns.

"I don't know where they got the guns," Arterburn said, "but I know where they learned to use them."

A group of veterans went to the city light and water building, overpowered the seven deputies, beat them, and carried them away as hostages.

BICYCLIST, 9, STRUCK BY AUTO ON MOUND STREET

Charles L. Hurst, 9, of 527 East Union street, riding a bicycle at 2:45 p. m. Thursday, was struck by an automobile which police said was driven west on Mound street by Wilson Woods, 30, clerk, 507 East Mound street.

The mishap occurred at the intersection of an alley west of Abernathy avenue according to the report of Patrolman Turney Ross. The report says that Woods stopped his car and offered to take the boy to a physician for examination to determine possible injuries but that the lad refused. The report further says that the motorist then talked with the boy's mother and that she refused to permit examination of her son by a doctor.

426 BEDS ADDED TO VA HOSPITAL SETUP IN OHIO

COLUMBUS, Aug. 2—The veterans' administration has added 426 hospital beds and 81 more doctors, dentists and nurses to its hospital program in Ohio in the past five months, the VA branch office announced here today.

Most of the increased bed capacity was due to transfer of Crile General Hospital at Cleveland from the Army to VA. Crile now has 300 beds and eventually will have 1,000.

The report showed a total of 6,592 beds now available in VA hospitals in the state, of which 5,498 were occupied with the remainder in reserved status or unavailable because of limited personnel.

The VA said it needed 70 more doctors, 10 more dentists and 137 additional nurses to staff its Ohio facilities.

TRUMAN AWAITS GROUP REPORT ON PALESTINE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2—President Truman today awaited a report from his cabinet committee on Palestine on their endorsement of a plan to divide the Holy Land into four parts.

The committee, composed of Henry F. Grady, Herbert Gaston and Goldthwaite H. Dorr, arrived by air yesterday from Paris after the President had summoned them home. They had conferred in the French capital with Secretary of State James F. Byrnes about the partition plan, worked out earlier in London with British representatives.

There were conflicting rumors about Mr. Truman's attitude on the Anglo-American proposal. But the majority held that Mr. Truman did not like the plan, still wanted 100,000 Jews admitted into Palestine immediately, and wished to discuss with the deputies the possibility of other approaches to the complex and conflict-laden issue.

LONDON, Aug. 2—Published reports that Prime Minister Clement Attlee was considering a trip to Washington to discuss the Palestine problem with President Truman were denied officially today.

Condition of Mrs. M. E. Swackhammer, 457 North Court street, who has been removed to her home following an appendectomy July 30 in Mercy hospital, Columbus, was reported improved Friday.

Woman In Siege

A woman, Mrs. Floyd John Buckman, had endured the siege. She and her husband were ordered out by the deputies just before they surrendered.

One jail defender was carried out so covered with blood it was impossible to tell if he were dead or alive. As he was placed in an ambulance, a woman in the crowd called out "doesn't he look sweet."

"And doesn't he look brave," yelled another.

By this time it seemed the whole town of 10,000 had swarmed to the jail area. The shooting had stopped entirely. Automobile spotlights played over the dejected deputies lined up before the building and horns blared.

A tremendous cheer went up as the ballot boxes were hauled from the jail and taken off by truck by members of the G. I. faction.

The yelling mob continued to make swipes at the deputies and one, C. M. Wise, who had only been sworn in yesterday, was knocked down repeatedly and dragged to his feet again. As each man struck him he yelled to the next in line "now you hit him."

Blood pouring from his eyes, ears, mouth and forehead, Wise finally was released as a businessman, Bill Cook, made himself heard above the crowd, shouting "men, let's not commit murder."

"No, not like they shot at our boys," a woman cried.

Pleads For Order

A veteran named Ralph Dugan then jumped out in front of the crowd and shouted "boys, you know I've been with you all day and it seems like I got a right to be heard from.

"We are going to put these men in jail and treat them a damn sight better than they would have treated us. You are fine young men, you have fought a good battle and you have won it.

"You are not going to do anything you'd regret now. We're going to keep the jail tonight. We want 150 to 200 armed men to be here. When the National Guard or whatever it is gets here we are going to have everything nice and orderly. We'll be in control and will dictate the terms."

As he finished to the accompaniment of wild cheers the G. I.'s dragged two more deputies from the jail.

In a special announcement, the "non-partisan" party to which the G. I.'s belonged along with dissident Democrats and Republicans asserted it had no choice in the riot except "to meet fire with fire."

'Met With Force'

"The G. I. election officials went to the polls unarmed to have a fair election as Pat Mansfield promised," the statement said. "They were met with blackjacks and pistols.

"Several G. I. officials were beaten and the ballot boxes were moved to the jail. The G. I. supporters went to the jail to get these ballot boxes and were met by gunfire."

"The G. I. candidates had promised that the votes would be counted as cast. They had no choice but to meet fire with fire. In the precincts where the G. I. candidates were allowed watchers they led by a 3 to 1 majority.

"The G. I.'s are elected and will serve as your county officials beginning Sept. 1, 1946."

The statement was signed by James Buttram, campaign manager whose towering figure had been the rallying point for the G. I.s throughout the battle of Athens.

A dozen fires had blazed in downtown Athens where members of the mob poured gasoline on automobiles belonging to the jail defenders, and turned them into torches which lit the terror swept streets.

At least one of the jail defenders had escaped through the mob. He was Bryan Sharpe who crawled out with part of one leg shot away, and made his way to Forie hospital for treatment.

"Thank God, I'm out of it," he said.

Women and children crouched in cellars at their homes or bolted their doors and hid under furniture as stray shots ricocheted through the streets of this sleepy mountain town.

The fight began when unarmed veterans who attempted to watch the balloting were roughed up by some of the 200 armed special deputy sheriffs, sworn in to "guard" the voting booths by Sheriff Mansfield, co-leader of the county Democratic machine.

The armed mob stormed the jail shortly after 10 o'clock last night and demanded the release of approximately 20 veterans who had been arrested during disturbances at the polls.

The barricaded deputies drove the mob back in an exchange of gun-fire, but the street-crowd then threw a seige ring around the jail and ignored repeated orders to disperse.

Gov. Jim McCord ordered a regiment of State Guard into Athens shortly after midnight. Another regiment was held in reserve.

The troops were ordered to put down the rioting as quickly as possible without further bloodshed.

Mob Heavily Armed

The mob was armed with submachine guns, rifles, pistols, shotguns, tear-gas, knives and clubs.

The day's entire voting was marked by clashes between the opposing factions. Fist fights were frequent.

By night fall, the office of the GI non-partisan committee, had become headquarters for angry veterans determined to protect the votes they had put in the ballot box.

Counting of ballots stopped when the gun fire broke out, but in the only returns reported the veteran-backed ticket was leading two to one.

The wounded were reported equally divided between the mob and the barricaded sheriff's forces.

Armed bands roved the streets. Neutral persons were unable to tell which side they represented. Sheriff Mansfield had brought in scores of outsiders, armed with squirrel rifles, shotguns and horse pistols in preparation for any trouble at the polls.

Hooligans tore down all telephone lines leading from the city.

Threatens Hostages

Shortly before midnight one of the special deputies stepped to a window of the jail and yelled that they would "shoot three of the veterans in here, unless you break it up."

The mob held its siege line. It was reported to be holding seven of the special deputies as hostages.

Col. Hilton Butler ordered the 6th regiment of the Tennessee state guard from Chattanooga to Athens when it was reported that several hundred veterans from other cities were rushing by automobile to bolster the local guard.

The veterans had sent observers to the polls when the old-line Democrats who control the party primary, in which nomination is tantamount to election, announced that the ballots would be counted only by machine Democrats.

The veterans had waged a strong pre-election campaign to oust the old-line regulars headed by State Sen. Paul Cantrell and Sheriff Mansfield. The two had decided to change jobs in this election, Cantrell running for sheriff and Mansfield for state senator.

The veterans did not put up a candidate to oppose Mansfield, but backed Knox Henry, a war veteran, for sheriff.

Mansfield swore in 300 special deputies, armed them, and sent them to the polls to stand guard.

The veterans sent unarmed watchers to each poll to report irregularities.

Clash At Polls

The first clash between the armed deputies and the veterans' observers occurred at the voting booth in the city light and water building. There seven special deputies allegedly threatened to kill the two ex-GI observers, Charles Scott, Jr., and Ed Vestal. The deputy sheriffs refused to let them leave the building.

When two newspapermen, Lowell E. Arterburn, publisher, and Neal Egsminger, reporter, of the Athens Post-Athenian, dropped in to ask how the election was going, Scott and Vestal plunged through a glass door and escaped.

"We decided that would be a good time to get out of there," Scott said.

The two went to a hospital and were treated for severe cuts. They then reported the incident to the Non-Partisan committee headquarters. A few minutes later the veterans appeared on the street with guns.

"I don't know where they got the guns," Arterburn said, "but I know where they learned to use them."

A group of veterans went to the city light and water building, overpowered the seven deputies, beat them, and carried them away as hostages.

Secretary of State James F. Byrnes, speaking out for the first time in the commission sessions, said he would vote against Poland. Britain and several small nations supported him, until it was clear that only the Soviet bloc would vote for Poland.

After an hour's debate, Poland withdrew the motion. She did not want to put the east-west split to a formal voting test at this time.

BICYCLIST, 9, STRUCK BY AUTO ON MOUND STREET

Charles L. Hurst, 9, of 527 East Union street, riding a bicycle at 2:45 p. m. Thursday, was struck by an automobile which police said was driven west on Mound street by Wilson Woods, 30, clerk, 507 East Mound street.

The mishap occurred at the intersection of an alley west of Abernathy avenue according to the report of Patrolman Turney Ross. The report says that Woods stopped his car and offered to take the boy to a physician for examination to determine possible injuries but that the lad refused. The report further says that the motorist then talked with the boy's mother and that she refused to permit examination of her son by a doctor.

CONFESSION DUE TUESDAY

CHICAGO, Aug. 2—An announcement from State's Attorney William J. Tuohy indicated today that William Heirens, 17, now could be expected to confess to him next Tuesday the kidnap-slaying of Suzanne Degnan and two other killings. Tuohy emerged about 11:10 a. m. from a conference with three of Heiren's attorneys, the second in three days since Heirens balked at making a confession, and announced that the prosecution and defense conferences would be resumed at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday.

426 BEDS ADDED TO VA HOSPITAL SETUP IN OHIO

COLUMBUS, Aug. 2—The veterans' administration has added 426 hospital beds and 81 more doctors, dentists and nurses to its hospital program in Ohio in the past five months, the VA branch office announced here today.

Most of the increased bed capacity was due to transfer of Crile General Hospital at Cleveland from the Army to VA. Crile now has 300 beds and eventually will have 1,000.

The report showed a total of 6,592 beds now available in VA hospitals in the state, of which 5,498 were occupied with the remainder in reserved status or unavailable because of limited personnel.

The VA said it needed 70 more doctors, 10 more dentists and 137 additional nurses to staff its Ohio facilities.

TRUMAN AWAITS GROUP REPORT ON PALESTINE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2—President Truman today awaited a report from his cabinet committee on Palestine on their endorsement of a plan to divide the Holy Land into four parts.

The committee, composed of Henry F. Grady, Herbert Gaston and Goldthwaite H. Dorr, arrived by air yesterday from Paris after the President had summoned them home. They had conferred in the French capital with Secretary of State James F. Byrnes about the partition plan, worked out earlier in London with British representatives.

There were conflicting rumors about Mr. Truman's attitude on the Anglo-American proposal. But the majority held that Mr. Truman did not like the plan, still wanted 100,000 Jews admitted into Palestine immediately, and wished to discuss with the deputies the possibility of other approaches to the complex and conflict-laden issue.

LONDON, Aug. 2—Published reports that Prime Minister Clement Attlee was considering a trip to Washington to discuss the Palestine problem with President Truman were denied officially today.

Condition of Mrs. M. E. Swackhammer, 457 North Court street, who has been removed to her home following an appendectomy July 30 in Mercy hospital, Columbus, was reported improved Friday.

YOUTHFUL PAIR CAPTURED AFTER HUGE MANHUNT

Kidnaping Of State Patrolman Last Crime For Fugitive And Teen-Age Bride

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Aug. 2—August Doak, 29, a fugitive from Southern Michigan prison, and his 16-year-old gunmoll bride were held in jail here today following their capture by state police after the greatest New Jersey manhunt since the Lindbergh kidnaping 14 years ago.

Their two-month crime-honeymoon began at the Convent of the Good Shepherd, Memphis, Tenn., where Doak was a handyman and Constance Blondell was a lovesick student.

It ended yesterday after they had kidnaped State Patrolman George Kell.

Doak, wanted by police in four states for kidnaping, jailbreak, auto theft, assault and robbery, surrendered meekly last night near Hopewell.

"Please don't shoot," he pleaded to his captors.

Kell was kidnaped yesterday shortly after he stopped the couple for a routine inspection of their motor car registration certificate.

Doak sped away in the car, which police said was stolen in Memphis. Kell chased him on his motorcycle.

When the convict halted his car suddenly, Kell and his motorcycle overturned. Doak then forced the patrolman at gun's point to enter the car. They drove off with the girl holding a gun in his side, Kell said.

After they had driven for awhile, Doak stopped and ordered the patrolman to get out and take off his shirt. Instead, Kell kicked the convict in the groin and dived for the underbrush. Doak emptied his revolver after him.

Meanwhile, a woman who had witnessed the kidnaping from her farmhouse window phoned state police who started the search.

More than 100 state and local police were rushed to the area and all roads were blocked. The kidnap car was spotted parked near the woods. Doak had fled on foot, leaving his bride in the car.

She surrendered to police.

"I have no gun," she said and broke into tears.

The girl had $300 in cash in her purse, and police found a suitcase in the car crammed with rolls of bills and sacks of silver change.

Bloodhounds were rushed to the scene by New York state police and an intensive search of the woods was begun.

Five hours later, Trooper Louis Masin, stationed near the Hopewell railroad bridge a-mile-and-a-half away, spotted Doak and captured him. Doak had two guns in his possession when he surrendered.

The girl said they were on their way to New York to visit her mother and stepfather, Dr. and Mrs. Frank Clemente.

Yes Sir! Maybe a wheel on your car is only an ounce out of balance at the rim. But when that wheel revolves at 60 miles an hour, the ounce of unbalance grows to a 12-pound vibrating force.

That force not only pounds, scrubs or scuffs away precious rubber, but the tremendous vibration puts a terrific strain on the front end parts of your car.

Let us check the wheels of your car today for balance on our BEAR DY-NAMIC WHEEL BALANCER.

YOUTHFUL PAIR CAPTURED AFTER HUGE MANHUNT

Kidnaping Of State Patrolman Last Crime For Fugitive And Teen-Age Bride

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Aug. 2—August Doak, 29, a fugitive from Southern Michigan prison, and his 16-year-old gunmoll bride were held in jail here today following their capture by state police after the greatest New Jersey manhunt since the Lindbergh kidnaping 14 years ago.

Their two-month crime-honeymoon began at the Convent of the Good Shepherd, Memphis, Tenn., where Doak was a handyman and Constance Blondell was a love-sick student.

It ended yesterday after they had kidnaped State Patrolman George Kell.

Doak, wanted by police in four states for kidnaping, jailbreak, auto theft, assault and robbery, surrendered meekly last night near Hopewell.

"Please don't shoot," he pleaded to his captors.

Kell was kidnaped yesterday shortly after he stopped the couple for a routine inspection of their motor car registration certificate.

Doak sped away in the car, which police said was stolen in Memphis. Kell chased him on his motorcycle.

When the convict halted his car suddenly, Kell and his motorcycle overturned. Doak then forced the patrolman at gun's point to enter the car. They drove off with the girl holding a gun in his side, Kell said.

After they had driven for awhile, Doak stopped and ordered the patrolman to get out and take off his shirt. Instead, Kell kicked the convict in the groin and dived for the underbrush. Doak emptied his revolver after him.

Meanwhile, a woman who had witnessed the kidnaping from her farmhouse window phoned state police who started the search.

More than 100 state and local police were rushed to the area and all roads were blocked. The kidnap car was spotted parked near the woods. Doak had fled on foot, leaving his bride in the car.

She surrendered to police.

"I have no gun," she said and broke into tears.

The girl had $300 in cash in her purse, and police found a suitcase in the car crammed with rolls of bills and sacks of silver change.

Bloodhounds were rushed to the scene by New York state police and an intensive search of the woods was begun.

Five hours later, Trooper Louis Masin, stationed near the Hopewell railroad bridge a-mile-and-a-half away, spotted Doak and captured him. Doak had two guns in his possession when he surrendered.

The girl said they were on their way to New York to visit her mother and stepfather, Dr. and Mrs. Frank Clemente.

NEW NAVY UNIFORMS ON PARADE

THE NAVY'S NEW UNIFORMS on test parade at Treasure Island, California, brought admissions from many seamen that they preferred the old style on grounds that the new ones "look too much like the Army's." PERON STATES ARGENTINA WILL SUPPORT U. S.

Argentine President Says His Country Would Fight With Other Americas

BY A. L. BRADFORD
Director United Press
Foreign Service
(World Copyright 1946 By United Press)

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 2—President Juan D. Peron said today that should there be another war, Argentina would fight on the side of the United States and the other American nations.

"Argentina is an American country, placed geographically in the American continent, and, consequently, my country inevitably forms an integral part of what might be called the 'American line'", President Peron declared in an interview in Argentina's famous Casarossada.

"We all know that there is a potential danger of other conflicts and if, unhappily, the statesmen of the world cannot prevent it, Argentina will be found ranged alongside the United States and the other American nations.

"A chain of mighty airdromes may proves to be far more necessary in the future, through the length of the American continent, than the Pan American highway. Argentina already is building such an airdrome at Ezeiza—outside of Buenos Aires—which will accommodate the greatest airplanes that can be envisaged during the next 10 years."

"Among the many accusations that have been hurled at me was that I was seeking to form a bloc of South American nations to be headed by Argentina, so as to counter-balance the United States. But how could a president of this country be so stupid? For Argentina to risk her destiny in such a bloc would mean that in a conflict she could be isolated and cut off from the great resources represented by the United States.

"No, Argentina prefers to be an equal partner in the great design of the union of all the Americas.

"Then, too, such a bloc would mean that Argentina would isolate herself from some of her most important markets. Do you think that I would want to limit our economic and commercial development to the market of our immediate neighbors?

"The world has developed through history, since the days when wars were fought between tribes, cities and then the nations of Europe, to the present age where conflicts will be between continents. Argentina is part of the American continent and, inevitably, will be aligned with the Uinted States and the other nations of the American continent in any future conflict.

"Argentina also has been developing through the various stages of isolationism that have characterized the foreign policy of the United States. In the war of 1914 the United States was still isolationist but, as a result of the World War just ended, it has now turned its back definitely on isolationism. Argentina was isolationist in the war of 1914 and to somewhat lesser extent in the war just ended. But Argentina surely will turn her back, likewise, on isolationism in any future war involving the Americas."

PERON STATES ARGENTINA WILL SUPPORT U. S.

Argentine President Says His Country Would Fight With Other Americas

BY A. L. BRADFORD
Director United Press
Foreign Service
(World Copyright 1946 By United Press)

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 2—President Juan D. Peron said today that should there be another war, Argentina would fight on the side of the United States and the other American nations.

"Argentina is an American country, placed geographically in the American continent, and, consequently, my country inevitably forms an integral part of what might be called the 'American line'", President Peron declared in an interview in Argentina's famous Casarossada.

"We all know that there is a potential danger of other conflicts and if, unhappily, the statesmen of the world cannot prevent it, Argentina will be found ranged alongside the United States and the other American nations.

"A chain of mighty airdromes may proves to be far more necessary in the future, through the length of the American continent, than the Pan American highway. Argentina already is building such an airdrome at Ezeiza—outside of Buenos Aires—which will accommodate the greatest airplanes that can be envisaged during the next 10 years."

"Among the many accusations that have been hurled at me was that I was seeking to form a bloc of South American nations to be headed by Argentina, so as to counter-balance the United States. But how could a president of this country be so stupid? For Argentina to risk her destiny in such a bloc would mean that in a conflict she could be isolated and cut off from the great resources represented by the United States.

"No, Argentina prefers to be an equal partner in the great design of the union of all the Americas.

"Then, too, such a bloc would mean that Argentina would isolate herself from some of her most important markets. Do you think that I would want to limit our economic and commercial development to the market of our immediate neighbors?

"The world has developed through history, since the days when wars were fought between tribes, cities and then the nations of Europe, to the present age where conflicts will be between continents. Argentina is part of the American continent and, inevitably, will be aligned with the Uinted States and the other nations of the American continent in any future conflict.

"Argentina also has been developing through the various stages of isolationism that have characterized the foreign policy of the United States. In the war of 1914 the United States was still isolationist but, as a result of the World War just ended, it has now turned its back definitely on isolationism. Argentina was isolationist in the war of 1914 and to somewhat lesser extent in the war just ended. But Argentina surely will turn her back, likewise, on isolationism in any future war involving the Americas."

UNITED WE STAND

"I don't believe this United Nations stuff is going to do any good," said the next-door neighbor as he sprinkled his lawn. He is not alone in that lack of enthusiasm. But apparently it has never occurred to him that if the United Nations is not successful, a portion of the blame lies with him.

The United Nations is the result of long and difficult effort on the part of the allied governments. It is not perfect, but it is the best organization for peace and international cooperation which could be devised in the time given.

The United Nations is a representative group. The man next door is represented, along with a bombed-out family in Holland, veterans in Russia, the English relatives, and all the other citizens of all the other countries which belong.

If these people really want peace and care enough to think about international problems, to read the peace conference news to the last word, and to back up their own representatives at conferences—the United Nations has a chance to accomplish its goal.

If the next-door neighbor, multiplied many times, is no more interested than to assume that no good can come of international talk, the delegates in the council chambers have a lonely struggle ahead of them. Taking the negative attitude, assuming hopelessness for the machinery which is the only constructive expression of hope, could kill the great chance for the world.

The United Nations needs the strength of the help and faith of all its peoples.

GOOD NEIGHBORS

WHEN it comes to the good neighbor policy, Douglas Lofdahl is not one to be hesitant. As a sailor from Minnesota on shore leave in Montevideo last winter, he took South American relations into his own hands. He went to the United States embassy, asked to borrow an interpreter, and then paid a call on the mayor. He told the Uruguayan official all about Montevideo, Minnesota, and made such a hit with his visit that he left bearing gifts. Later a bale of Uruguayan flags was sent up to Minnesota for use in parades.

The word got around in diplomatic circles, and the result of it all was that Montevideo, Uruguay, took part by short wave radio in a fiesta in Montevideo, Minnesota, last week. Mayor Roland N. Aaker, in the north, and Intendente Juan P. Famini, in the south, had a lively correspondence in their respective languages to lay somewhat elaborate plans.

This story of international friendship promoted by one young navy man with a bright idea must make some of the United States' hard-working foreign service officials just a little wistful.

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK, Aug. 2—The fellow who thought up the slogan "crime doesn't pay" wasn't hep to radio. The crimes of the airwaves not only pay well, but the principals like as not are playing both ends against the sponsors and collecting for deeds both dastardly and valiant.

Some of radio's most righteous slueths can be found from time to time slumming in the scowl-and-growl roles of murderers, professional gangsters and operators in the bubble gum black market. And most of them wind up sooner or later on the "This Is Your FBI" show. Take Les Damon, for example.

On the "Thin Man" show, Damon is that famous fictional dabbler in detection, Nick Charles. Criminals tremble at his name because they know that he's bound to get them just before the last commercial. But when he appears on the FBI program occasionally, Damon is a gangster tough enough to make even Sherlock Charles entertain a few qualms. Damon says that this change of pace gives him balance—bank balance.

If you don't find Damon sowing his wild oats on the FBI spot in any given week, you're likely to discover Ed Begley as the object of G-Man affection. Ed is merely the Charlie Chan of the program bearing that name, and, as such, has nailed many a criminal with a Chinese epigram manufactured in Radio City. If it isn't Begley, maybe it will be Joe Curtin, who regularly demonstrates the better side of his character as Mr. North of the "Mr. and Mrs. North" show.

Others who have caused the FBI trouble by dropping in the social and moral scale include Al Hodges, who used to be the Lone Ranger; Jimmy Meighan, who is the Falcon; Bette Garde of the "Policewoman" show; Santos Ortega, a respected police inspector as Ellery Queen's father, and Walter Vaughn of "Gangbusters."

These are only some of the better known people. Many other radio actors shuttle back and forth across the line of right and wrong in some 30 whodunit or crime programs on the air.

But the fellow who makes the biggest haul from these radio rascalities as a writer, Dashiell Hammett. The "Thin Man" program was inspired by his best-selling detective novel of the same name which came out more than a dozen years ago. He collects for use of the name. Hammett writes a comparatively recent program called, logically enough, "The Fat Man." He also is the author of a new series called "Sam Spade." His weekly income is in four figues.

Paul Muni, who has been away from the stage for four years, will come back early in September in an important role in a musical drama created by Ben Hecht as a propaganda weapon to be sponsored by the American League for a Free Palestine. "A Flag Is Born" is the name of the work, which won't be a commercial venture in the usual sense, but which will be presented with all the care and professional skill such shows receive. After playing two weeks at the Century theater here, it will tour principal cities.

DIET AND HEALTH

So You Can't Get to Sleep! Try a Bath and a Dull Book

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

THE harder you try to go to sleep, the more wide awake you become.

To those who find themselves irritable and depressed from habitual lack of sleep this may seem cold comfort, but if they are to solve their problem, they must learn that they cannot drive themselves to sleep. They must drift into this happy state.

Any effort, even the effort to go to sleep, induces wakefulness. So don't make the effort and, above all, don't worry about not sleeping.

Hinder Not Help

It won't help; it will hinder, and furthermore, it constitutes needless fuss in view of the fact that only a few hours of sound sleep nightly are required for health.

Instead of going to bed to prod yourself to sleep, take a brisk walk before bedtime. A warm bath, a warm, non-stimulating drink, and a dull book are also helpful. To be avoided are excessive smoking and large evening meals.

According to Drs. Laurence Hughes and S. E. Jones of Australia, there are two kinds of natural sleep. One they call physiologic and the other psychologic. In physiologic sleep, the sleep is sound and there are no dreams. The amount of physiologic sleep needed is small, and varies according to the age and the type of work a person does. Psychologic sleep, they find, is regulated by custom and habit. Both types of sleep are deficient only in rare cases.

Psychologic Sleep

Most of the ordinary complaints accompanying sleeplessness, such as irritability, inability to concentrate and depression come from a lack of psychologic sleep. If a person awakens from sleep suddenly, it may be due to some condition such as heart disease or ulcers.

Such things as bright lights, loud noises, and worry may delay sound sleep or cause awakening from light sleep.

If sleeplessness is really present, it requires a careful study by the physician to determine the various causes which may be present, but in most cases simple regulation of habits suffices to overcome the difficulty.

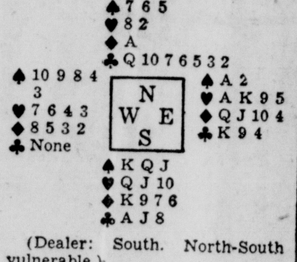

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

CURB YOUR IMPATIENCE

"FAST PLAYERS" are usually creatures of habit. In the vast majority of situations, they play according to some kind of rule. As soon as a circumstance confronts them, they apply the first rule that seems to fit the case. Could this be because of a particular kind of inferiority complex? Would a psycho-analist or psychiatrist say they want other people to think of them as having sharp, fast-acting minds? Probably so in many cases. At any rate, their failure to curb their impatience and think a bit, instead of acting first and thinking later, hands hundreds of points to their fortunate opponents.

(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 NT

West led his fourth-best spade 4. East, seeing the menace of that long club suit, with a side entry to help bring it in, took the opening trick with the A and then switched to the diamond 4, knocking out the dangerous entry.

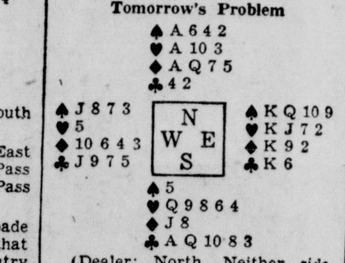

South saw that, if the missing three clubs were divided on a basis of two in one defender's hand and one in the other, his contract was safe and sure as could be. He also saw that he could make it against three clubs in the East if that defender would use his K on the first club lead. Likewise, he would be safe if West had all three and would be unwise enough to play the K on the first trick.

Hoping for the 2-1 division, but also providing all possible lure for play of the K on the first club, he led the Q from dummy. East, as is his custom, promptly "covered an honor with an honor," and the A killed his K. That of course enabled South to get seven tricks in clubs plus two in diamonds and two in spades, for two extra tricks.

If East had played low on the club Q, South could have scored only three club tricks and would have been set, no matter what he did thereafter.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

If East had doubled for a take-out, then both defenders bid spades, how should South play for 4-Hearts after the spade 3 lead?

Capital News... By Frederick C. Othman

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2—Now we've got drama and excitement and G-men; whoop-de-do in the U. S. senate exactly as in the movies, and all I know still is that Congressman John Coffee of Wash., took the $2,500.

He didn't report it as income to the tax collector, because it was a gift. Neither did he mention it to his fellow congressmen, because he got it in a year when he wasn't campaigning for re-election.

So there was the gum-chewing James P. McGranery, assistant to the attorney general, testifying before the senate war investigating committee that he told J. Edgar Hoover to call off his sleuths because the statute of limitations has run its course. More than three years had passed since the Tacoma contractor slipped the congressman the dough. Here comes the drammer:

"But had it not been for the statute of limitations, you would have pressed the case?" demanded Sen. Homer Ferguson of Mich.

"Oh yes, I would have given it to the grand jury," said McGranery, still chomping his spearmint.

"That's evidence enough for me," snapped Sen. Ferguson. "You believe a crime was committed."

"Oh, no," cried a man on the sidelines: the congressman, himself, exploding a lung full of technicolor necktie to loop outside his coat as he jumped up to splutter:

"You are asking Mr. McGranery to judge the case."

McGranery said he did not mean to judge it. Sen. Ferguson said he'd asked no such thing and that was the climax to a day of such arguments as these old ears seldom have heard.

It's odd how explosive a subject politics can be; the boys get red in the face and yell. The day's principal witness was the congressman's ex-secretary Paul A. Olson, who looked like a young man of distinction with the four points of his handkerchief peeping from the breast pocket of his well-dressed gray-plaid suit.

Sen. Ferguson accused him in so many words of breaking the criminal code by accepting the $2,500 from contractor Eivind Anderson and handing it to the congressman.

"Sir," said Olson in a voice that almost reached the volume of a scream, "if that was a crime, than I suggest you investigate the thousands of other crimes. Look into the crimes committed by the Dupont, the Pews, everybody else who contributed to the Republicans."

Sen. Ferguson said this was no place for a political speech, but that if Olson insisted on making one, he might better list the wartime contributions made to the Democratic party.

Things went on from there, with yelping and exploding flash bulbs and enough confusion to make the cops jump to attention. I covered my face with my arms, in case the furniture began to fly, and opened one eye.

All I could see was that superlative cravat of Congressman Coffee. It was striped horizontally in red, yellow, blue, green, orange and brown. A denizen of the press table at my right muttered: "Coffee is boiling."

I guess he was. I tip-toed out of there while I still was in one piece.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

MARY PATTEN, the tired look gone from her face, smiled fondly at Charie. "It is so nice to have you here!"

Charie dropped into a chair with a little sigh of contentment. Peach Place had no reality now. This was what she knew—this pleasantly cozy room, the small table with its fresh cloth and shining silver waiting in the bay of the window, her mother relaxed in her winged-back chair.

Nettie came with their dinner. She was part of the reality. Nettie, who had scolded her and fussed over her almost as far back as she could remember.

"They're moving me into a new office," said Mary Patten. "When I'm settled you must come in to see it. It's going to be very impressive!"

"Your name on the door?"

"Possibly. It's next to James Muir's."

Charie whistled. "Top floor? 'Last stop, lady'."

"Until I retire . . ."

"As if you'd do that! Or James Muir'd let you!"

It was as it had been so many evenings—their talk of the interests they shared.

Mary Patten spoke of Doug's appointment to the Congressional Commission going to Peru.

Charie exclaimed, "Really? I didn't know. Tell me about it."

"I don't know much more than that he was asked to go and is going. I called Flo, but she was rather vague about any definite plans—all she seemed to know was that he would leave soon."

After they left the table Mary Patten said, "You should get some clothes for the summer, Charie. We might have lunch together tomorrow—no, the next day, and go into Tegler's. . . ."

"Oh, I couldn't pay HER prices!" Charie laughed. But she flushed a little as she laughed. Trent had brought her a very business-like looking account book, suggesting that she put down in it the money she spent.

She had done it, but now it seemed terribly penny pinching and she did not want to tell her mother of it.

Mary Patten looked down at the small coffee cup she still held in her hand. "That reminds me . . . I intended to speak of it before. I'm going to deposit some money in a checking account for you at the Merchants'. . . . A hundred dollars each month."

"A HUNDRED — oh, Mother, that's too much! You mustn't . . ."

"You think Trent may object?" Mary Patten smiled slightly.

Charie hadn't been thinking of Trent. But when her mother spoke of him, she did, with the instant conviction that he would not like it.

"If he does, you can tell him I'm simply selfish in doing this. I'll have more peace of mind, too, knowing it is in the bank for you and Trent to use, if some emergency comes up."

"You—selfish!" A rush of affection broke Charie's voice. "You never think of yourself—it's always Flo and me! Trent has a savings account, but it's awfully little—he sends something to his mother every now and then. If I had one, too . . . I needn't rush out and spend it all!" finished Charie practically.

"Not all," agreed her mother. "But the idea of the account is that, if you want a dress from Tegler's you'll have the money to go and buy it!"

"Well, one, perhaps." Then Charie said on a burst of breath, "I could put it toward the rent of a nicer place to live!"

It was all in her voice, her feeling about Peach Place and the third-floor room, the sights and sounds and smells of the neighborhood, the loneliness of the long days. . . . But Mary Patten did not let her expression alter and when she spoke it was in a tone of merely enlarging on Charie's words. "Yes, you could do that! It was novel, rather Bohemian, to go down there to live, but a few weeks of it is enough. Trent surely will see that it isn't fair to you to live in such a way—he knows what you were accustomed to. Naturally you want a place where you can have your friends in. . . . Blink told me that they are all quite sad because none of them have seen you since Flo's dinner."

"Trent has some work to do, almost every evening," defended Charie. But she did not give it a convincing sound, for she knew it wasn't the reason she had not invited Blink or any of the others to come down. . . . She knew her mother knew it wasn't.

She changed the subject. "How's the book going?"

"I don't know. I haven't seen Neil Winslow for several days. She's writing a first draft, I imagine, for me to read."

There wasn't anything more to say about that. Charie got up from her chair. "I must go back . . ."

"You'll do this whenever Trent doesn't come home!"

"Yes. I'd love to . . ."

"We'll go to the theater some evening. Trent would want you to amuse yourself when he's working. You'll take a taxi going home?"

"No, the bus. It goes within two blocks."

"But those two blocks! And going through them alone, Charie! Hand me my bag—it's there on the desk."

"The neighborhood isn't so bad as that," Charie protested. But she took the bill her mother offered her.

"Luncheon, don't forget, darling, day after tomorrow," reminded Mary Patten. "We'll go to the Griswold to eat—that's near Tegler's."

Charie's answer was to throw her arms around her mother and kiss her. "You're so good to me!" Her voice was thick with feeling.

Trent was sitting at his desk when she opened the the door.

"Hello! Go to a movie?" But he barely lifted his head and he did not move to come to her.

"No. I had dinner with my mother."

"Fine. How is she?"

"All right. Working awfully hard. She's moving into a new office . . ." Charie stopped. Trent wasn't hearing a word.

"I'll be through in a few minutes, sweet. I only have to compare these statements . . ."

The note of excitement was in his voice. But now she need not feel aggrieved. She was secretly excited. For very soon they could move away from here. . . . She considered the arguments she would put forward if Trent objected to using the money her mother was depositing in the bank to her account.

"Trent must see that it's only fair to you . . ."

It needn't be an awfully expensive place — simply nice. She thought of some apartments on Fairview Avenue, facing the park. She and Blink had gone through one, one day.

Each had a little terrace opening from the living room. In warm weather they could eat out on the terrace. . . .

Suddenly Trent pushed back his chair with a violence that upset it. "By God, I think I'm on to it!" He caught her by the elbows. "You see, I think I've a sure lead on what's held up that housing project until it stinks!"

"Oh," said Charie, a little blankly, for to her it was anticlimax. "What do you mean—a housing project?"

"You don't know? But, of course, you're too young! The papers were full of it two years ago. The plan to clear that section between Tremont Street and the river and build lower-rental apartment houses. God knows that cesspool ought to be cleaned out—two-thirds of the vice in the city breeds there. The kids born down there haven't a chance to know what decency is . . ."

He had pushed her down into the Morris chair again; he sat on the arm of it, half-facing her, frowning, his eyes dark with their fighting look. "You see, I've got pretty familiar with it — most of the crimes I cover take me down there. It makes a man sick to the pit of him that such places exist!"

The violence of his feeling frightened Charie a little. If ever he were as angry as that at her. . . .

For Friday, August 2

FOR those who are able to shake off certain subjective or deep-seated inner urges or confusions, there is splendid promise for the consummation of ambitious or long-range goals of more than passing significance to the life, its fortunes and cherished happiness.

This culmination affects financial, professional, social, intellectual and spiritual values, with romance and adventure, possibly of a spectacular cast. But the ways and means must have firm, sound and well-organized basis and astute strategies, with practical objectives always kept to the fore.

Those whose birthday it is are assured of excellent prospects for decisive advance upon cherished goals and fulfilled aspirations and ambitions, perhaps to a surprising or spectacular degree, in which the private, domestic, business and financial issues are of far-reaching consequence.

However, a certain tendency to the subjective, elusive or intriguing may becloud the issue. Well-planned and executed programs, and clearly marked objectives may attract those interested in subtle, exceptional or unique adventures or romantic contracts. The feet must be planted on the ground though the head be in the clouds. Move cautiously.

A child born on this day may be blessed with much versatility or unique abilities, assuring it a romantic, intriguing and possibly spectacular career, with happiness and thrills.

UNITED WE STAND

"I don't believe this United Nations stuff is going to do any good," said the next-door neighbor as he sprinkled his lawn. He is not alone in that lack of enthusiasm. But apparently it has never occurred to him that if the United Nations is not successful, a portion of the blame lies with him.

The United Nations is the result of long and difficult effort on the part of the allied governments. It is not perfect, but it is the best organization for peace and international cooperation which could be devised in the time given.

The United Nations is a representative group. The man next door is represented, along with a bombed-out family in Holland, veterans in Russia, the English relatives, and all the other citizens of all the other countries which belong.

If these people really want peace and care enough to think about international problems, to read the peace conference news to the last word, and to back up their own representatives at conferences—the United Nations has a chance to accomplish its goal.

If the next-door neighbor, multiplied many times, is no more interested than to assume that no good can come of international talk, the delegates in the council chambers have a lonely struggle ahead of them. Taking the negative attitude, assuming hopelessness for the machinery which is the only constructive expression of hope, could kill the great chance for the world.

The United Nations needs the strength of the help and faith of all its peoples.

GOOD NEIGHBORS

WHEN it comes to the good neighbor policy, Douglas Lofdahl is not one to be hesitant. As a sailor from Minnesota on shore leave in Montevideo last winter, he took South American relations into his own hands. He went to the United States embassy, asked to borrow an interpreter, and then paid a call on the mayor. He told the Uruguayan official all about Montevideo, Minnesota, and made such a hit with his visit that he left bearing gifts. Later a bale of Uruguayan flags was sent up to Minnesota for use in parades.

The word got around in diplomatic circles, and the result of it all was that Montevideo, Uruguay, took part by short wave radio in a fiesta in Montevideo, Minnesota, last week. Mayor Roland N. Aaker, in the north, and Intendente Juan P. Famini, in the south, had a lively correspondence in their respective languages to lay somewhat elaborate plans.

This story of international friendship promoted by one young navy man with a bright idea must make some of the United States' hard-working foreign service officials just a little wistful.

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK, Aug. 2—The fellow who thought up the slogan "crime doesn't pay" wasn't hep to radio. The crimes of the airwaves not only pay well, but the principals like as not are playing both ends against the sponsors and collecting for deeds both dastardly and valiant.

Some of radio's most righteous slueths can be found from time to time slumming in the scowl-and-growl roles of murderers, professional gangsters and operators in the bubble gum black market. And most of them wind up sooner or later on the "This Is Your FBI" show. Take Les Damon, for example.

On the "Thin Man" show, Damon is that famous fictional dabbler in detection, Nick Charles. Criminals tremble at his name because they know that he's bound to get them just before the last commercial. But when he appears on the FBI program occasionally, Damon is a gangster tough enough to make even Sherlock Charles entertain a few qualms. Damon says that this change of pace gives him balance—bank balance.

If you don't find Damon sowing his wild oats on the FBI spot in any given week, you're likely to discover Ed Begley as the object of G-Man affection. Ed is merely the Charlie Chan of the program bearing that name, and, as such, has nailed many a criminal with a Chinese epigram manufactured in Radio City. If it isn't Begley, maybe it will be Joe Curtin, who regularly demonstrates the better side of his character as Mr. North of the "Mr. and Mrs. North" show.

Others who have caused the FBI trouble by dropping in the social and moral scale include Al Hodges, who used to be the Lone Ranger; Jimmy Meighan, who is the Falcon; Bette Garde of the "Policewoman" show; Santos Ortega, a respected police inspector as Ellery Queen's father, and Walter Vaughn of "Gangbusters."

These are only some of the better known people. Many other radio actors shuttle back and forth across the line of right and wrong in some 30 whodunit or crime programs on the air.

But the fellow who makes the biggest haul from these radio rascalities as a writer, Dashiell Hammett. The "Thin Man" program was inspired by his best-selling detective novel of the same name which came out more than a dozen years ago. He collects for use of the name. Hammett writes a comparatively recent program called, logically enough, "The Fat Man." He also is the author of a new series called "Sam Spade." His weekly income is in four figues.

Paul Muni, who has been away from the stage for four years, will come back early in September in an important role in a musical drama created by Ben Hecht as a propaganda weapon to be sponsored by the American League for a Free Palestine. "A Flag Is Born" is the name of the work, which won't be a commercial venture in the usual sense, but which will be presented with all the care and professional skill such shows receive. After playing two weeks at the Century theater here, it will tour principal cities.

DIET AND HEALTH

So You Can't Get to Sleep! Try a Bath and a Dull Book

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

THE harder you try to go to sleep, the more wide awake you become.

To those who find themselves irritable and depressed from habitual lack of sleep this may seem cold comfort, but if they are to solve their problem, they must learn that they cannot drive themselves to sleep. They must drift into this happy state.

Any effort, even the effort to go to sleep, induces wakefulness. So don't make the effort and, above all, don't worry about not sleeping.

Hinder Not Help

It won't help; it will hinder, and furthermore, it constitutes needless fuss in view of the fact that only a few hours of sound sleep nightly are required for health.

Instead of going to bed to prod yourself to sleep, take a brisk walk before bedtime. A warm bath, a warm, non-stimulating drink, and a dull book are also helpful. To be avoided are excessive smoking and large evening meals.

According to Drs. Laurence Hughes and S. E. Jones of Australia, there are two kinds of natural sleep. One they call physiologic and the other psychologic. In physiologic sleep, the sleep is sound and there are no dreams. The amount of physiologic sleep needed is small, and varies according to the age and the type of work a person does. Psychologic sleep, they find, is regulated by custom and habit. Both types of sleep are deficient only in rare cases.

Psychologic Sleep

Most of the ordinary complaints accompanying sleeplessness, such as irritability, inability to concentrate and depression come from a lack of psychologic sleep. If a person awakens from sleep suddenly, it may be due to some condition such as heart disease or ulcers.

Such things as bright lights, loud noises, and worry may delay sound sleep or cause awakening from light sleep.

If sleeplessness is really present, it requires a careful study by the physician to determine the various causes which may be present, but in most cases simple regulation of habits suffices to overcome the difficulty.

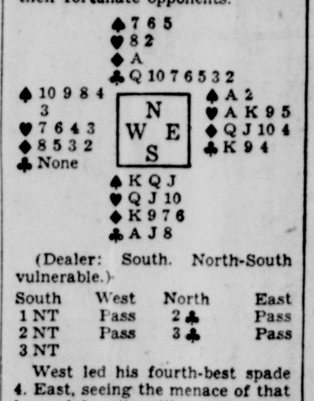

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

CURB YOUR IMPATIENCE

"FAST PLAYERS" are usually creatures of habit. In the vast majority of situations, they play according to some kind of rule. As soon as a circumstance confronts them, they apply the first rule that seems to fit the case. Could this be because of a particular kind of inferiority complex? Would a psycho-analist or psychiatrist say they want other people to think of them as having sharp, fast-acting minds? Probably so in many cases. At any rate, their failure to curb their impatience and think a bit, instead of acting first and thinking later, hands hundreds of points to their fortunate opponents.

West led his fourth-best spade 4. East, seeing the menace of that long club suit, with a side entry to help bring it in, took the opening trick with the A and then switched to the diamond 4, knocking out the dangerous entry.

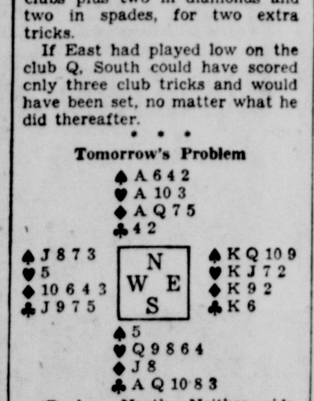

South saw that, if the missing three clubs were divided on a basis of two in one defender's hand and one in the other, his contract was safe and sure as could be. He also saw that he could make it against three clubs in the East if that defender would use his K on the first club lead. Likewise, he would be safe if West had all three and would be unwise enough to play the K on the first trick.

Hoping for the 2-1 division, but also providing all possible lure for play of the K on the first club, he led the Q from dummy. East, as is his custom, promptly "covered an honor with an honor," and the A killed his K. That of course enabled South to get seven tricks in clubs plus two in diamonds and two in spades, for two extra tricks.

If East had played low on the club Q, South could have scored only three club tricks and would have been set, no matter what he did thereafter.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

If East had doubled for a take-out, then both defenders bid spades, how should South play for 4-Hearts after the spade 3 lead?

Capital News... By Frederick C. Othman

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2—Now we've got drama and excitement and G-men; whoop-de-do in the U. S. senate exactly as in the movies, and all I know still is that Congressman John Coffee of Wash., took the $2,500.

He didn't report it as income to the tax collector, because it was a gift. Neither did he mention it to his fellow congressmen, because he got it in a year when he wasn't campaigning for re-election.

So there was the gum-chewing James P. McGranery, assistant to the attorney general, testifying before the senate war investigating committee that he told J. Edgar Hoover to call off his sleuths because the statute of limitations has run its course. More than three years had passed since the Tacoma contractor slipped the congressman the dough. Here comes the drammer:

"But had it not been for the statute of limitations, you would have pressed the case?" demanded Sen. Homer Ferguson of Mich.

"Oh yes, I would have given it to the grand jury," said McGranery, still chomping his spearmint.

"That's evidence enough for me," snapped Sen. Ferguson. "You believe a crime was committed."

"Oh, no," cried a man on the sidelines: the congressman, himself, exploding a lung full of technicolor necktie to loop outside his coat as he jumped up to splutter:

"You are asking Mr. McGranery to judge the case."

McGranery said he did not mean to judge it. Sen. Ferguson said he'd asked no such thing and that was the climax to a day of such arguments as these old ears seldom have heard.

It's odd how explosive a subject politics can be; the boys get red in the face and yell. The day's principal witness was the congressman's ex-secretary Paul A. Olson, who looked like a young man of distinction with the four points of his handkerchief peeping from the breast pocket of his well-dressed gray-plaid suit.

Sen. Ferguson accused him in so many words of breaking the criminal code by accepting the $2,500 from contractor Eivind Anderson and handing it to the congressman.

"Sir," said Olson in a voice that almost reached the volume of a scream, "if that was a crime, than I suggest you investigate the thousands of other crimes. Look into the crimes committed by the Dupont, the Pews, everybody else who contributed to the Republicans."

Sen. Ferguson said this was no place for a political speech, but that if Olson insisted on making one, he might better list the wartime contributions made to the Democratic party.

Things went on from there, with yelping and exploding flash bulbs and enough confusion to make the cops jump to attention. I covered my face with my arms, in case the furniture began to fly, and opened one eye.

All I could see was that superlative cravat of Congressman Coffee. It was striped horizontally in red, yellow, blue, green, orange and brown. A denizen of the press table at my right muttered: "Coffee is boiling."

I guess he was. I tip-toed out of there while I still was in one piece.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

MARY PATTEN, the tired look gone from her face, smiled fondly at Charie. "It is so nice to have you here!"

Charie dropped into a chair with a little sigh of contentment. Peach Place had no reality now. This was what she knew—this pleasantly cozy room, the small table with its fresh cloth and shining silver waiting in the bay of the window, her mother relaxed in her winged-back chair.

Nettie came with their dinner. She was part of the reality. Nettie, who had scolded her and fussed over her almost as far back as she could remember.

"They're moving me into a new office," said Mary Patten. "When I'm settled you must come in to see it. It's going to be very impressive!"

"Your name on the door?"

"Possibly. It's next to James Muir's."

Charie whistled. "Top floor? 'Last stop, lady'."

"Until I retire . . ."

"As if you'd do that! Or James Muir'd let you!"

It was as it had been so many evenings—their talk of the interests they shared.

Mary Patten spoke of Doug's appointment to the Congressional Commission going to Peru.

Charie exclaimed, "Really? I didn't know. Tell me about it."

"I don't know much more than that he was asked to go and is going. I called Flo, but she was rather vague about any definite plans—all she seemed to know was that he would leave soon."

After they left the table Mary Patten said, "You should get some clothes for the summer, Charie. We might have lunch together tomorrow—no, the next day, and go into Tegler's. . . ."

"Oh, I couldn't pay HER prices!" Charie laughed. But she flushed a little as she laughed. Trent had brought her a very business-like looking account book, suggesting that she put down in it the money she spent.

She had done it, but now it seemed terribly penny pinching and she did not want to tell her mother of it.

Mary Patten looked down at the small coffee cup she still held in her hand. "That reminds me . . . I intended to speak of it before. I'm going to deposit some money in a checking account for you at the Merchants'. . . . A hundred dollars each month."

"A HUNDRED — oh, Mother, that's too much! You mustn't . . ."

"You think Trent may object?" Mary Patten smiled slightly.

Charie hadn't been thinking of Trent. But when her mother spoke of him, she did, with the instant conviction that he would not like it.

"If he does, you can tell him I'm simply selfish in doing this. I'll have more peace of mind, too, knowing it is in the bank for you and Trent to use, if some emergency comes up."

"You—selfish!" A rush of affection broke Charie's voice. "You never think of yourself—it's always Flo and me! Trent has a savings account, but it's awfully little—he sends something to his mother every now and then. If I had one, too . . . I needn't rush out and spend it all!" finished Charie practically.

"Not all," agreed her mother. "But the idea of the account is that, if you want a dress from Tegler's you'll have the money to go and buy it!"

"Well, one, perhaps." Then Charie said on a burst of breath, "I could put it toward the rent of a nicer place to live!"

It was all in her voice, her feeling about Peach Place and the third-floor room, the sights and sounds and smells of the neighborhood, the loneliness of the long days. . . . But Mary Patten did not let her expression alter and when she spoke it was in a tone of merely enlarging on Charie's words. "Yes, you could do that! It was novel, rather Bohemian, to go down there to live, but a few weeks of it is enough. Trent surely will see that it isn't fair to you to live in such a way—he knows what you were accustomed to. She changed the subject. "How's the book going?"

"I don't know. I haven't seen Neil Winslow for several days. She's writing a first draft, I imagine, for me to read."

There wasn't anything more to say about that. Charie got up from her chair. "I must go back . . ."

"You'll do this whenever Trent doesn't come home!"

"Yes. I'd love to . . ."

"We'll go to the theater some evening. Trent would want you to amuse yourself when he's working. You'll take a taxi going home?"

"No, the bus. It goes within two blocks."

"But those two blocks! And going through them alone, Charie! Hand me my bag—it's there on the desk."

"The neighborhood isn't so bad as that," Charie protested. But she took the bill her mother offered her.

"Luncheon, don't forget, darling, day after tomorrow," reminded Mary Patten. "We'll go to the Griswold to eat—that's near Tegler's."

STARS SAY—

For Friday, August 2

FOR those who are able to shake off certain subjective or deep-seated inner urges or confusions, there is splendid promise for the consummation of ambitious or long-range goals of more than passing significance to the life, its fortunes and cherished happiness.

This culmination affects financial, professional, social, intellectual and spiritual values, with romance and adventure, possibly of a spectacular cast. But the ways and means must have firm, sound and well-organized basis and astute strategies, with practical objectives always kept to the fore.

Those whose birthday it is are assured of excellent prospects for decisive advance upon cherished goals and fulfilled aspirations and ambitions, perhaps to a surprising or spectacular degree, in which the private, domestic, business and financial issues are of far-reaching consequence.

However, a certain tendency to the subjective, elusive or intriguing may becloud the issue. Well-planned and executed programs, and clearly marked objectives may attract those interested in subtle, exceptional or unique adventures or romantic contracts. The feet must be planted on the ground though the head be in the clouds. Move cautiously.

A child born on this day may be blessed with much versatility or unique abilities, assuring it a romantic, intriguing and possibly spectacular career, with happiness and thrills.

HOUSEWIVES TO USE BIG CROP OF '46 PEACHES

Peaches will be one crop that will be plentiful for home and community canning. In this area home-grown supplies later are expected to be abundant and stress should be laid only on the fresh table use of early shipped-in peaches. Every effort must be made to secure maximum use of peaches, both fresh and in home canning or freezing. The supply of commercially canned fruits is expected to be insufficient to meet consumer demand during the coming year.

Here are a few pointers from the Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics. Keep ripe peaches cool until used. Spread them out to avoid bruising and allow peaches that are a little on the green side ripen at room temperature.

To keep sliced peaches from turning dark and becoming unattractive, either peel just before using, or sprinkle the cut fruit with a little lemon juice.

To conserve sugar try a little honey or syrup, or other sweetening on hand.

Use chilled peaches in refreshing salads, halved peaches nesting in crisp lettuce for example, sometimes with cottage cheese or cream cheese or chopped fruit in the hollow of the peach half. Or combine peaches and other fruits, crisp and cold, and cut in slices or good sized diced pieces. A fruit salad fits anywhere in a meal. It may be used as a starter, with the main course, or as a dessert.

When serving fruit salads, the authorities advise one to be fat thrifty. A small measure of table fat or mild flavored drippings provides enough fat in a cooked dressing. Cream that sours in hot weather can be turned to account. As a fat in homemade dressings, it is particularly good with fruit.

For a super Summer dessert, make peach melba by putting a scoopful of vanilla ice cream into a hollow of a peach half. . . pour a little raspberry sirup on top. . . add a few chopped nuts. Or, let sliced peaches or peach sauce top a serving of ice cream to make a sundae.

DUV ENTERTAINS VETERANS

Mrs. E. L. Tolbert, Mrs. John D. Newton, Mrs. Irene Jenkins, Mrs. Frank Webbe, and Mrs. W. E. Pickens, from the local chapter of the Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil war, joined a group from the Chillicothe tent and went to Veterans hospital Thursday afternoon where they entertained the soldiers and served refreshments.

'WOO-OO-OO' WYNN TAKES BRIDE

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

When you buy a new dress, look at the hem, as often they need attention because they are so loosely sewed or simply basted. Try the garment on to see that the skirt hangs evenly and is of the right length, then rehem with secure stitches and strong thread.

In irons of high wattage, heat is controlled by means of a thermostat. This adds to the cost, but the temperature is kept more constant and unnecessary current consumption is reduced. Also, danger of scorching and fire is lessened.

A great deal of food can be saved if wrapped in waxed paper. Waxed paper is made by a process in which thin sheets of paper are dipped in melted paraffin similar to that which is used to top home made jams and jellies.

It is a good idea to keep pieces of rubber nailed to ends of the family stepladder to prevent the ladder slipping.

Marshmallows should be kept in a bread box both before and after opening the package.

The utensil in which you bake has something to do with the temperature at which you should bake food. For instance, a dish which you would bake at 350 deg. F. in aluminum should be baked at only 325 deg. F. in glass

REUNION TO BE HELD

FLORENCE GREGG IS THE BRIDE OF WILLIAM O'DAY

Mrs. Annalee Gregg, Washington C. H., announces the marriage of her daughter, Florence Olive Gregg, to William Bennett O'Day, son of Bennett O'Day, Mt. Sterling.

The double ring ceremony was performed at noon July 20 at the Methodist parsonage, Greenup, Kentucky, with the Rev. B. L. Allen officiating.

Miss Louise Mahoney and Dewey Stage Jr., both of Mt. Sterling, attended the couple.

For her marriage the bride wore a white Bemberg sheer dress, with white accessories and pinned at her shoulder was a corsage of pink roses and white delphinium. Miss Mahoney was wearing a blue frock with white accessories.

Following a short wedding trip the newlyweds will make their home with the grandfather of the bridegroom, John O'Day, Mt. Sterling.

The bride attended Washington high school while the groom is a graduate of Mt. Sterling high school. After serving for one year as a T-5 in the U. S. Armed forces, in the South Pacific area, he recently received his discharge.

DODGERS' LEAD AGAIN CUT BY ST. LOUIS NINE

Cards Only Game And A Half Back As They Leave; Tribe Edges Sox

NEW YORK, Aug. 2—No team has been beaten more consistently by St. Louis this season than the first place Dodgers and ironically that very supremacy may cost the Cardinals the pennant.

The Cardinals go all out to beat Brooklyn, saving their best pitchers and concentrating long in advance on victory tactics, and their efforts have paid off with 11 victories against four defeats.

Significantly, however, the Red Birds have played mediocre baseball against teams they face directly before and after combat with Brooklyn. Just before beating the Dodgers two games out of three with a 3 to 1 triumph in yesterday's finale, the Cards won only one game in three at Boston. Today as they move on to Philadelphia, none of their ace pitchers will be rested.

In contrast to their 11-4 mark late innings, but bore down with nine and lost eight against teams played directly before a Dodger series and has four victories against teams faced directly afterward.

The Dodgers, passing up artistic satisfaction, have refused to point for the Cardinals, yet have remained in first place virtually the entire season by running up a fat advantage against weaker clubs.

The number two St. Louis lefty, Harry (The Cat) Brecheen, subdued the Dodgers yesterday, reducing their lead to a game and a half. He was hit hard in the late innings, but bore own with men on base, forcing the Dodgers to hit into three double plays. The Dodgers made 10 hits and Howie Pollet was rushed in for a relief chore in the eighth. Enos Slaughter started the Cardinals to victory with a wind-wafted second inning homer, and in the fourth they added two more runs on Marty Marion's single, Del Rice's triple and an error by pitcher Vic Lombardi.

Dodger outfielder Pete Reiser escaped serious injury when he crashed into the left field wall chasing Whitey Kurowski's double in the fifth. He was expected to be released today from a hospital where he was taken for X-rays and observation.

Two homers by Tommy Henrich and one by Billy Johnson gave the Yankees a 4 to 2 victory at Detroit which put them back in second place. Rookie Randy Gumpert scored his sixth victory against one defeat.

Ancient Mel Harder, who has been with Cleveland 18 straight seasons, won his 215th major league triumph and it was one of the most satisfying, a 2 to 1 decision over the Red Sox which put their lead to 11½ games. Joe Dobson lost a four-hitter when George Case scored an unearned run on third baseman Glen Russell's error.

The White Sox scored three runs on four singles in the sixth to defeat the Athletics at Chicago, 7 to 6, nullifying Pete Suder's four run homer.

Jack Kramer's four-hit pitching enabled the Browns to sweep their three game series with Washington at St. Louis, with an 8 to 2 victory in the finale. Jeff Heath hit a two-run homer in the sixth when the Browns made four runs off Dutch Leonard.

Cincinnati at Philadelphia and Pittsburgh at Boston in the National were rained out.

CONCHITA WINS FEATURE RACE AT PLAIN CITY FAIR

Conchita, owned by T. D. Van Camp, Williamsport, won the free-for-all trot at Plain City fair racing Thursday.

In her second start this season, her seventh of her career, Conchita won two of three heats in an average time of 2:07¼. She won the Wildenn, Dublin, Ohio trophy.

MARINE BAND TOURS AGAIN

ESKIMO IS NEW THREAT TO JOE LOUIS REIGN

ANCHORAGE, ALASKA, Aug. 2—From the land of the midnight sun came a new threat today to Joe Louis' world heavyweight boxing championship — Noseemo—a fullblooded Eskimo and present champion of Alaska.

An Eskimo heavyweight is a rare thing. The average native stands five feet four inches in height and weighs about 140 pounds. Noseemo, whose American name is Percy Blatchford,; is five feet 10 inches tall and weighs 195 pounds, sans furs, boots and parka.

Noseemo, in 21 fights with amateurs, knocked out 16 opponents and decisioned five. His latest victime was a six-foot, four inch, 240 pound Fairbanks giant named Borneo Nick. Noseemo told his commanding officer he did not think he was in good enough condition to beat Nick and wanted time off from his Army fish handling job at Fort Richardson to train.

His commander promised him a week's furlough if he won. Noseemo forthwith chilled Nick in three rounds.

Noseemo at 23 has unusual strength, due to vigorous outdoor life. In the Summer he hunts and works in a fish camp where they prepare the Winter's supply of feed for dog teams. In the Winter he scouts and trails by dog team throughout the frozen north and across desolate arctic wastes.

Does he want a bout with Joe Louis?

"I like try," he said "Maybe I hit him."

Alaskans say when Noseemo hits 'em "they stay hit."

But he'll have to keep hitting them in the Army for two more years before he can take on any American heavyweights in the states.

RICHARDS LOSES THRILLER IN TOURNEY PLAY

Richards Implement lost 2-0 to Portsmouth Ramey Feeds in the feature game of the district tournament at Chillicothe Thursday night.

Each team got one hit and played errorless ball. Todd McKinney's wildness cost Richards. Scorers said McKinney walked five, hit two batters and had 11 wild pitches. The one hit he granted drove in one of the runs.

Only 21 Richards batters faced Ken DeMint. The lone hit was made by Davis with two out in the sixth.

In other games Portsmouth Owls Club blanked Hillsboro Steen and Beets, 4-0; Portsmouth Adams Bakery downed Piketon Bierl's Cafe 15-5, the game called at the end of five innings because of the 10-run rule; Chillicothe Texaco margined Portsmouth Independents, 7-4.

Tonight Blue Ribbon plays Kingston Merchants; Portsmouth Barklow Engineers meet Hillsboro Farmer's Exchange and Williamsport Red and White plays Hillsboro Rooney Taxi.

STANSBURY-STOUT PLAYS 2 GAMES HERE SATURDAY

Stansbury-Stout will present a doubleheader softball program at Ted Lewis park Saturday night.

In the first game, starting at 7:30, Stansbury-Stout will play Duffy's Tavern. The second opponent will be Aeronca Aircraft Corp. Both teams are from Middletown.

The Duffy team is leading in the tournament in the Middletown area.

The first commercial citrus grove was planted in Texas in 1904.

BLUE RIBBON 9 TAKES LEAD IN NIGHT LEAGUE

Isaly's Handed 9-8 Defeat In Thriller At Ted Lewis Park

Blue Ribbon was the top team in the Night Softball league Friday following a 9-8 defeat of Isaly's in a thrilling game at Ted Lewis park Thursday night before an overflow crowd.

Blue Ribbon has lost only one game in the second round of play and finished the round with a 6-1 record. Stansbury-Stout is in second place with a 5-1 record, having a game left with Williamsport Red and White. Isaly's now has lost twice.

Blue Ribbon got only five hits off Dick Wellington but took advantage of his wildness and errors by his teammates. The winners took a 5-0 lead in the second inning, scoring on four hits, including Bob Moon's home run, a walk and error. Leon Sims' long fly to right field went for four bases to open the inning when the right fielder was charged with an error.

Isaly's got back one in the second on two hits, one J. Gregg's double. Two more came in the third on two hits, error and hit batsmen. A hit batter, sacrifice and errors gave Blue Ribbon one in the fourth. Isaly's scored four in the fourth on four hits, including Paul Nance's double, and three errors. In the fifth Blue Ribbon scored three with only one hit, four walks and a hit batter helping. A hit, error and infield out gave Isaly's its last run in the sixth.

Tonight at 8:30 American Legion and Esmeralda are scheduled to play off a postponed game. Monday night Williamsport Red and White and Stansbury-Stout tangle in another postponed game.

ST. PAUL GAINS IN ASSOCIATION; BIRDS WIN 2-1

By United Press

St. Paul gained ground on the leaders in the American Association today after trimming Louisville, 7 to 2, while first-place Indianapolis was losing to Minneapolis, 12 to 6.

In other games last night Columbus edged out Kansas City, 2 to 1, and Toledo beat Milwaukee, 4 to 3.

Pete Mazar and Karl Drews tangled in a pitcher's battle, which Columbus won although it got less hits than Kansas City. Mazar scattered 12 hits over the route while Drews allowed the cellarites nine. Two errors by the Blues helped the Red Bird cause.

DODGERS' LEAD AGAIN CUT BY ST. LOUIS NINE

Cards Only Game And A Half Back As They Leave; Tribe Edges Sox

NEW YORK, Aug. 2—No team has been beaten more consistently by St. Louis this season than the first place Dodgers and ironically that very supremacy may cost the Cardinals the pennant.

The Cardinals go all out to beat Brooklyn, saving their best pitchers and concentrating long in advance on victory tactics, and their efforts have paid off with 11 victories against four defeats.

Significantly, however, the Red Birds have played mediocre baseball against teams they face directly before and after combat with Brooklyn. Just before beating the Dodgers two games out of three with a 3 to 1 triumph in yesterday's finale, the Cards won only one game in three at Boston. Today as they move on to Philadelphia, none of their ace pitchers will be rested.

In contrast to their 11-4 mark late innings, but bore down with nine and lost eight against teams played directly before a Dodger series and has four victories against teams faced directly afterward.

The Dodgers, passing up artistic satisfaction, have refused to point for the Cardinals, yet have remained in first place virtually the entire season by running up a fat advantage against weaker clubs.

The number two St. Louis lefty, Harry (The Cat) Brecheen, subdued the Dodgers yesterday, reducing their lead to a game and a half. He was hit hard in the late innings, but bore own with men on base, forcing the Dodgers to hit into three double plays. The Dodgers made 10 hits and Howie Pollet was rushed in for a relief chore in the eighth. Enos Slaughter started the Cardinals to victory with a wind-wafted second inning homer, and in the fourth they added two more runs on Marty Marion's single, Del Rice's triple and an error by pitcher Vic Lombardi.

Dodger outfielder Pete Reiser escaped serious injury when he crashed into the left field wall chasing Whitey Kurowski's double in the fifth. He was expected to be released today from a hospital where he was taken for X-rays and observation.

Two homers by Tommy Henrich and one by Billy Johnson gave the Yankees a 4 to 2 victory at Detroit which put them back in second place. Rookie Randy Gumpert scored his sixth victory against one defeat.

Ancient Mel Harder, who has been with Cleveland 18 straight seasons, won his 215th major league triumph and it was one of the most satisfying, a 2 to 1 decision over the Red Sox which put their lead to 11½ games. Joe Dobson lost a four-hitter when George Case scored an unearned run on third baseman Glen Russell's error.

The White Sox scored three runs on four singles in the sixth to defeat the Athletics at Chicago, 7 to 6, nullifying Pete Suder's four run homer.

Jack Kramer's four-hit pitching enabled the Browns to sweep their three game series with Washington at St. Louis, with an 8 to 2 victory in the finale. Jeff Heath hit a two-run homer in the sixth when the Browns made four runs off Dutch Leonard.

Cincinnati at Philadelphia and Pittsburgh at Boston in the National were rained out.

CONCHITA WINS FEATURE RACE AT PLAIN CITY FAIR

Conchita, owned by T. D. Van Camp, Williamsport, won the free-for-all trot at Plain City fair racing Thursday.

In her second start this season, her seventh of her career, Conchita won two of three heats in an average time of 2:07¼. She won the Wildenn, Dublin, Ohio trophy.

ESKIMO IS NEW THREAT TO JOE LOUIS REIGN

ANCHORAGE, ALASKA, Aug. 2—From the land of the midnight sun came a new threat today to Joe Louis' world heavyweight boxing championship — Noseemo—a fullblooded Eskimo and present champion of Alaska.

An Eskimo heavyweight is a rare thing. The average native stands five feet four inches in height and weighs about 146 pounds. Noseemo, whose American name is Percy Blatchford, is five feet 10 inches tall and weighs 195 pounds, sans furs, boots and parka.

Noseemo, in 21 fights with amateurs, knocked out 16 opponents and decisioned five. His latest victime was a six-foot, four inch, 240 pound Fairbanks giant named Borneo Nick. Noseemo told his commanding officer he did not think he was in good enough condition to beat Nick and wanted time off from his Army fish handling job at Fort Richardson to train.

His commander promised him a week's furlough if he won. Noseemo forthwith chilled Nick in three rounds.

Noseemo at 23 has unusual strength, due to vigorous outdoor life. In the Summer he hunts and works in a fish camp where they prepare the Winter's supply of feed for dog teams. In the Winter he scouts and trails by dog team throughout the frozen north and across desolate arctic wastes.

Does he want a bout with Joe Louis?

"I like try," he said "Maybe I hit him."

Alaskans say when Noseemo hits 'em "they stay hit."

But he'll have to keep hitting them in the Army for two more years before he can take on any American heavyweights in the states.

RICHARDS LOSES THRILLER IN TOURNEY PLAY

Richards Implement lost 2-0 to Portsmouth Ramey Feeds in the feature game of the district tournament at Chillicothe Thursday night.

Each team got one hit and played errorless ball. Todd McKinney's wildness cost Richards. Scorers said McKinney walked five, hit two batters and had 11 wild pitches. The one hit he granted drove in one of the runs.

Only 21 Richards batters faced Ken DeMint. The lone hit was made by Davis with two out in the sixth.

In other games Portsmouth Owls Club blanked Hillsboro Steen and Beets, 4-0; Portsmouth Adams Bakery downed Piketon Bierl's Cafe 15-5, the game called at the end of five innings because of the 10-run rule; Chillicothe Texaco margined Portsmouth Independents, 7-4.

Tonight Blue Ribbon plays Kingston Merchants; Portsmouth Barklow Engineers meet Hillsboro Farmer's Exchange and Williamsport Red and White plays Hillsboro Rooney Taxi.

BLUE RIBBON 9 TAKES LEAD IN NIGHT LEAGUE

Isaly's Handed 9-8 Defeat In Thriller At Ted Lewis Park

Blue Ribbon was the top team in the Night Softball league Friday following a 9-8 defeat of Isaly's in a thrilling game at Ted Lewis park Thursday night before an overflow crowd.

Blue Ribbon has lost only one game in the second round of play and finished the round with a 6-1 record. Stansbury-Stout is in second place with a 5-1 record, having a game left with Williamsport Red and White. Isaly's now has lost twice.

Blue Ribbon got only five hits off Dick Wellington but took advantage of his wildness and errors by his teammates. The winners took a 5-0 lead in the second inning, scoring on four hits, including Bob Moon's home run, a walk and error. Leon Sims' long fly to right field went for four bases to open the inning when the right fielder was charged with an error.

Isaly's got back one in the second on two hits, one J. Gregg's double. Two more came in the third on two hits, error and hit batsmen. A hit batter, sacrifice and errors gave Blue Ribbon one in the fourth. Isaly's scored four in the fourth on four hits, including Paul Nance's double, and three errors. In the fifth Blue Ribbon scored three with only one hit, four walks and a hit batter helping. A hit, error and infield out gave Isaly's its last run in the sixth.

Tonight at 8:30 American Legion and Esmeralda are scheduled to play off a postponed game. Monday night Williamsport Red and White and Stansbury-Stout tangle in another postponed game.

ST. PAUL GAINS IN ASSOCIATION; BIRDS WIN 2-1

By United Press

St. Paul gained ground on the leaders in the American Association today after trimming Louisville, 7 to 2, while first-place Indianapolis was losing to Minneapolis, 12 to 6.

In other games last night Columbus edged out Kansas City, 2 to 1, and Toledo beat Milwaukee, 4 to 3.

Pete Mazar and Karl Drews tangled in a pitcher's battle, which Columbus won although it got less hits than Kansas City. Mazar scattered 12 hits over the route while Drews allowed the cellarites nine. Two errors by the Blues helped the Red Bird cause.

MURDER WITH MUSIC

Carl Brisson gets himself abducted and somewhat manhandled as a result of his gallant efforts to come to the assistance of a young lady who is searching for some valuable papers during "The Case Of Mystery Manor," latest adventure in Mutual's "murder-with-music series," "A Voice In The Night," Friday, (7:30-8 p. m., EST).

SPOTLIGHT BANDS

The man with the horn, Harry James, will demonstrate to his confreres, Guy Lombardo and Xavier Cugat, the proper way to give out with the melodic line during the rendition of his own selection for the spotlight "tune of the week," "You'll Never Know," on "Spotlight Bands," Friday, (8:30-9 p. m., EST) over Mutual. It may be just coincidental, or a matter of great historical import, that the James crew then segues into Buddy De Vitos vocal rendition of "They Say It's Wonderful," other tunes on the James agenda for this date include —"All Of Me," "Surrender," "I Don't Know Why" and "Blue Lou."

PASSPORT TO ROMANCE

A strange ship appears out of nowhere flying the dread black and white Jolly Roger at its masthead, and as a result the passengers of the S. S. Harmonia, including Chuck and Nancy, are thrown into a panic in the latest episode of "Passport To Romance," Friday, (7-7:30 p. m., EST) over Mutual. The two young singers, as played by Mitzi Green and Larry Brooks, are taken prisoner, but their fears prove groundless when they learn the strange ship is part of a movie set.

GRAND CENTRAL

Luther Adler, leading man of the serious Broadway theater, and member of the distinguished New York stage family, stars in the original Grand Central Station drama, at 12 noon Saturday, EST, over CBS. Mr. Adler was recently on Broadway ni the Theatre Guild productions, "Dunningan's Daughter," and Konstantin Simonov's "The Russian People." A member of the original Provincetown Players and of the Group Theatre, he has played a succession of roles in Clifford Odets' plays, notably "Golden Boy."

OPPORTUNITY, U. S. A.

The cross-country trek of Mutual's roving ex-GI reporters, Bill Berns and Bill Raidt, carries them to Cleveland, Ohio, to report to Mutual listeners on "Opportunity, U. S. A." on the broadcast Saturday, (3:45-4 p. m., EST). Berns and Raidt will interview a typical Cleveland vet with regard to his return to civilian business life.

SAM SPADE

"Sam and Psyche" is the name of the case solved by Dashiell Hammett's favorite private detective on "The Adventures of Sam Spade," Friday, at 7 p. m. EST, over ABC. It stars Howard Duff. Veteran Spade fans who may be a little concerned over Sam going highbrow on them, taking up psychology on one case and poetry on another may be reassured that Sam still relies on his fists and automatic when the going gets tough. In "Sam and Psyche" a prominent psychologist comes to Spade's dingy office to seek his help in recovering the missing case record of a patient. He explains that all the records are highly confidential and that the loss is serious both to himself and the patient. To complicate matters further, a blackmailer has secured a copy and threatens to use it for extortion.

GRAND OLE OPRY

Music in a coonskin cap will be served up by Red Foley and his "Grand Ole Opry" company, in the NBC broadcast, Saturday, at 9:30 p. m., EST. Foley opens the show with "Methodist Pie," a lighthearted expresion of faith, brought over from England by the first settlers of Kentucky. The Old Hickory Singers harmonize another authentic old-timer, "Red River Valley," and Shorty and Red, Pee Wee King's fiddling pair, play the old breakdown, "Arkansas Traveler." Whitey Ford, the Duke of Paducah, offers a brief touch of the modern in his comedy monologue, and Foley remains up-to-date in the love song, "Blue Eyes Crying in the Rain." Wally Fowler and his Oak Ridge Quartet sing "Don't You Want to Go to Heaven," a new adaptation of the old gospel tune, "Amazing Grace." Minnie Pearl romps in from Grinder's Switch with the latest bulletins from that crossroads community. Mack McGarr's mandolin solo is "Farewell Blues," written during World War I. "There's a Light Guiding Me,' 'a hymn dating back to pioneer days, is Foley's hymn of the evening, and the closing square dance, "Devil's Dream," also dates back to the days of the muzzleloading rifles.

MURDER WITH MUSIC

Carl Brisson gets himself abducted and somewhat manhandled as a result of his gallant efforts to come to the assistance of a young lady who is searching for some valuable papers during "The Case Of Mystery Manor," latest adventure in Mutual's "murder-with-music series," "A Voice In The Night," Friday, (7:30-8 p. m., EST).

SPOTLIGHT BANDS

The man with the horn, Harry James, will demonstrate to his confreres, Guy Lombardo and Xavier Cugat, the proper way to give out with the melodic line during the rendition of his own selection for the spotlight "tune of the week," "You'll Never Know," on "Spotlight Bands," Friday, (8:30-9 p. m., EST) over Mutual. It may be just coincidental, or a matter of great historical import, that the James crew then segues into Buddy De Vitos vocal rendition of "They Say It's Wonderful," other tunes on the James agenda for this date include —"All Of Me," "Surrender," "I Don't Know Why" and "Blue Lou."

PASSPORT TO ROMANCE

A strange ship appears out of nowhere flying the dread black and white Jolly Roger at its masthead, and as a result the passengers of the S. S. Harmonia, including Chuck and Nancy, are thrown into a panic in the latest episode of "Passport To Romance," Friday, (7-7:30 p. m., EST) over Mutual. The two young singers, as played by Mitzi Green and Larry Brooks, are taken prisoner, but their fears prove groundless when they learn the strange ship is part of a movie set.

GRAND CENTRAL

Luther Adler, leading man of the serious Broadway theater, and member of the distinguished New York stage family, stars in the original Grand Central Station drama, at 12 noon Saturday, EST, over CBS. Mr. Adler was recently on Broadway ni the Theatre Guild productions, "Dunningan's Daughter," and Konstantin Simonov's "The Russian People." A member of the original Provincetown Players and of the Group Theatre, he has played a succession of roles in Clifford Odets' plays, notably "Golden Boy."

OPPORTUNITY, U. S. A.

The cross-country trek of Mutual's roving ex-GI reporters, Bill Berns and Bill Raidt, carries them to Cleveland, Ohio, to report to Mutual listeners on "Opportunity, U. S. A." on the broadcast Saturday, (3:45-4 p. m., EST). Berns and Raidt will interview a typical Cleveland vet with regard to his return to civilian business life.

SAM SPADE

"Sam and Psyche" is the name of the case solved by Dashiell Hammett's favorite private detective on "The Adventures of Sam Spade," Friday, at 7 p. m. EST, over ABC. It stars Howard Duff. Veteran Spade fans who may be a little concerned over Sam going highbrow on them, taking up psychology on one case and poetry on another may be reassured that Sam still relies on his fists and automatic when the going gets tough. In "Sam and Psyche" a prominent psychologist comes to Spade's dingy office to seek his help in recovering the missing case record of a patient. He explains that all the records are highly confidential and that the loss is serious both to himself and the patient. To complicate matters further, a blackmailer has secured a copy and threatens to use it for extortion.

GRAND OLE OPRY

Music in a coonskin cap will be served up by Red Foley and his "Grand Ole Opry" company, in the NBC broadcast, Saturday, at 9:30 p. m., EST. Foley opens the show with "Methodist Pie," a light-hearted expresion of faith, brought over from England by the first settlers of Kentucky. The Old Hickory Singers harmonize another authentic old-timer, "Red River Valley," and Shorty and Red, Pee Wee King's fiddling pair, play the old breakdown, "Arkansas Traveler." Whitey Ford, the Duke of Paducah, offers a brief touch of the modern in his comedy monologue, and Foley remains up-to-date in the love song, "Blue Eyes Crying in the Rain." Wally Fowler and his Oak Ridge Quartet sing "Don't You Want to Go to Heaven," a new adaptation of the old gospel tune, "Amazing Grace." Minnie Pearl romps in from Grinder's Switch with the latest bulletins from that crossroads community. Mack McGarr's mandolin solo is "Farewell Blues," written during World War I. "There's a Light Guiding Me,' 'a hymn dating back to pioneer days, is Foley's hymn of the evening, and the closing square dance, "Devil's Dream," also dates back to the days of the muzzleloading rifles.

Pickaway County Canneries Ready To Start Corn Packing

NO SHORTAGE OF LABOR EXPECTED THIS SEASON

Local Factories Have Full Staffs For Canning Corn, Pumpkins And Beans

Canneries in the Circleville area were making preparations Friday for the start of the corn-packing season which is expected to get under way late next week.

Several hundred part and full-time workers will take part in the 1946 canning of corn, lima beans, and pumpkin crops. For several weeks the Winorr Canning Company, Esmeralda Canning Company, and the Crites Milling Company have been recruiting workers and placing the factories in readiness.

Officials of the Crites Milling Company, 705 South Court street, which operates factories at Ashville and New Holland, said that at the height of the coming operations the two plants will keep approximately 275 workers busy for several weeks. They said that no shortage of labor is anticipated, adding that during the recent packing of peas the company had to turn workers away.

The Winorr Canning Company spokesman said that the corn crop is late and that the canning of corn will not begin until late next week and perhaps even later, that the plant at 301 Logan street will employ 200 or more persons, and that no shortage of labor is expected. Following the handling of the corn crop, they explained, the plant will pack soy beans, and pumpkin, with the pumpkin canning scheduled to take place in October.

Officials of the Esmeralda Canning Company, 401 South Western avenue, could not be reached for comment.

Canneries throughout Ohio will employ approximately 20,000 persons by September it was predicted at Columbus by Paul H. Motz, state director of the U. S. Employment Service.

"The labor requirements of the canning plants will be as great as during any war year and in some localities greater", he said, "because there will be no prisoners of war or foreign workers available."

However, Circleville area canneries reported many workers have voluntarily registered and are awaiting a call to begin the job when the crops are received at the plants and operations are ready to begin.

GALLAHERS TAKE OVER PROPERTY IN WILLIAMSPORT

Plans for a business to be operated under the name of Gallaher's, in the Betts property known as the "hotel property" on Water street at Williamsport, were announced Friday by Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Gallaher, Chillicothe, the new owners.

They said that as soon as remodeling of the building is completed they will establish the new business, handling lumber, sash, doors, millwork, cement, lime, plaster, sewer pipe, brick, cement blocks, and also furniture, electrical appliances and materials, paints, plumbing items, rugs linoleum, stoves and other items.

The entire first floor will be prepared for store purposes with the exception of two rooms for a new beauty parlor. The second floor will have two modern apartments, one for use by Mr. and Mrs. Gallaher and the other for tenancy by a future employee. At the rear of the store will be a new planing mill, lumber sheds, and the two present buildings at the rear will be remodeled for storage purposes.

Mr. Gallaher was for 25 years manager of the Chillicothe Lumber Company, until his resignation last December because of ill health. Mrs. Gallaher was also formerly affiliated with the Chillicothe Lumber Company.

INJURY FAILS TO SLOW HUMOR OF MACK SAUER

Fact that he had undergone surgery only a few hours earlier failed to diminish the humor of Mack Sauer, Leesburg newspaper publisher and widely known humorist, who addressed the Rotary club Thursday following a noon luncheon at the Pickaway Arms.

Appearing with his right arm in a sling Sauer disclosed that an artery in his arm was severed in an accident and that the arm had been sewn by surgeons at Greenfield just preceding the trip to Circleville.

Sauer's rapid-fire succession of side-splitting stories, humorous poetry, and jokes, kept his listeners in an uproar of laughter.

MOUND CITY IS NATIONAL PARK UNDER NEW PLAN

Mound City had become a part of the chain of national parks, Friday, with William W. Luckett as custodian. Transfer of Mound City from state control to the National Park Service was effected last Tuesday when J. C. Harrington, regional archaeologist, Region 1, Richmond, Va., National Park Service, accepted the national monument from Richard S. Fatig, curator of state memorials, representing the Ohio State Archaeological and Historical Society.

William W. Luckett, who accompanied Harrington, has been named custodian of the Mound City group on a 60-day assignment, after which a permanent appointment will be made. Luckett is residing at the McCarty hotel, Chillicothe. A graduate of Vanderbuilt university with a major in history, he has been with the National Park Service since 1933. Luckett has served as custodian of Shiloh National Military Park in Tennessee, Okmulgee National Monument at Macon, Ga., and Salem Maritime National Historic Site, Salem, Mass. From Chillicothe he will go to a permanent assignment at Ft. Pulaski National Monument, Savannah, Ga.

RUPTURE

Expert Coming To Chillicothe Again

GEO. L. HOWE

Well-known expert, of Indianapolis, and ex-U. S. Army Medical Corpsman, will personally demonstrate his method without charge at the Warner Hotel, Chillicothe, Tuesday, August 6th, from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m.

Mr. Howe says the Howe method contracts the openings in remarkably short time on the average case, regardless of the size or location of the rupture and no matter how much you lift or strain, and puts you back to work the same day as efficient as before you were ruptured.

The Howe Rupture Shield has no leg strap; waterproof, sanitary, practically indestructible, and can be worn while bathing. Each shield is skillfully molded and fitted to the parts under heat, which gives a perfect fit and satisfaction.

Large and difficult ruptures following operations especially solicited.

Do not overlook this opportunity if you want gratifying results. Mailing address P. O. Box 5233 E. Michigan St. Station, Indianapolis 1, Ind.
